Mc GILL*Steel, Markets And Politics

When the steel strike settlement news came through, a corporation lawyer digested the news and sighed:

"Oh, for the good old days of conservative F.D.R. and the New Deal."

The fact is, of course, we are still operating on the plateau attained by the New Deal. We then demonstrated, as a people and as a capitalistic system, that we had matured as a nation to the point where we could settle our major problems without an ideology such as the Marxists or Fascists set up, and also without violence. That we will continue to demonstrate this maturity is indicated by the moves toward a top level labor-management conference.

If, as it appears, it has become necessary, in world affairs, to hold "summit meetings" attended by the heads of government, it is not at all strange that a similar one should be held by those most concerned with making an industrial civilization work without an ideology or violent clashes between groups.

But we should not overlook the post-mortem findings in the still-warm body of the steel strike. Chief among them is the fact that the steel strike will make for more bigness. Of equal importance is the inescapable conclusion that the settlement makes all the more difficult the position of steel in the world market.

That we need a high-level conference is inescapable. But it should not be had without preliminary study and, more important, a steady course in public education.

Foreign Competition

U.S. Steel, for example, likely would be able to meet foreign competition. It is further along with automation necessary to reduce costs. But most of the smaller steel companies cannot do so. This certainly is a matter of real concern to labor which cannot view the loss of jobs with unconcern.

Therefore, there must rather quickly be a meeting of minds on this subject of automation. It is expensive. It requires time for manufacture and installation. There must be more research into further cost-saving devices and techniques. The leaders of labor see this. But they are paying the penalty of not having let their knowledge be shared by local organizations. Labor will need to do a job educating its members. Because of failure at the top, the rank and file of craft union members have been allowed to believe that it was labor's policy to attack automatic devices and to take management which attempted to work out use of them.

We now are at the point in our industrial development where many industries which are small in the relative sense, but which actually are quite large employers of labor, will increasingly find themselves unable to compete. They have not had the capital to spend on automation. They have not possessed the imagination and vision to keep up with the times.

Efficient Bigness

The new steel settlement, in the long run, will be disastrous to them. They cannot compete and the government cannot hold back the larger company. U.S. Steel, because our industrial society requires efficient bigness to prevent us from being buried by Mr. Khrushchev's system which is moving, with all possible speed, toward the greatest obtainable efficiency.

At least two of the automobile companies, for example, have been able, through modernization of plant, to reduce unit costs to where they could, if they desired, put less well planned competitors out of business. The same thing is true of one of the major electrical manufacturing concerns.

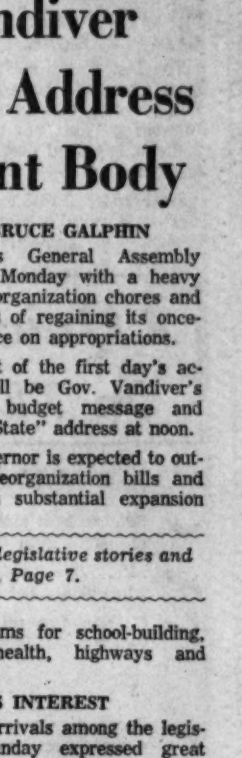

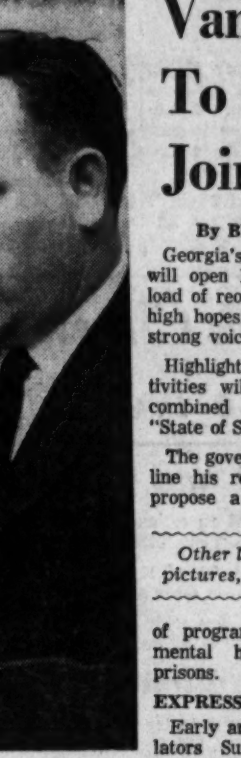

All this is a part of markets, jobs, and politics. Mr. Nixon may be hurt politically, insofar as some of the conservative business leadership is concerned. But both time, events and the inexorable, inescapable pressures of industrial developments are on his side politically.

A top-level labor-management conference is not merely indicated. It is imperative.

Woman, 86, in Driveway

An 86-year-old woman was killed by a car in the driveway of her home Sunday afternoon in northeast Atlanta.

DeKalb county police said Mrs. Alice Lewis of 1149 Cumberland Rd., NE, died when she was pinned between a car and a wall on Beechcliff drive, NE. Police said she was sitting in the car, which was parked in a carport, and the brakes apparently gave way. The car rolled down the driveway and hit a retaining wall, crushing her as she was attempting to get out of the car.

In Ohio Train Crash

WELLINGTON, Ohio (AP)—The New York Central's Southwest Limited, speeding through mist and fog, ran off the rails here Sunday night and smashed down a signal tower. Sheriff Vernon Smith said six persons were killed—a fireman and five passengers.

More than 40 of 155 passengers aboard were injured.

Husband

Shoots Self

An Alpharetta man shot and killed his wife late Sunday night, then shot himself, inflicting an arm wound, police said.

The shooting occurred in the home of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Boles, on Hamby road, Rte. 1, Alpharetta.

Police said Mrs. Frances Boles, 56, died instantly from a 20-gauge shotgun blast fired at close range. She was struck in the area of the heart.

Arthur Boles, 59, was admitted to the Forsyth County Hospital at Cumming. Police said he shot the muscle out of his upper left arm. They said there were indications he meant to kill himself.

Detective R. P. McGee of the Atlanta police department, who was investigating the shooting because it occurred in unincorporated area of Fulton County, said the incident apparently grew out of a family argument.

Forsyth County Sheriff Loy Barnett, first officer to arrive at the scene, called Atlanta police because the shooting occurred about 200 feet over the Forsyth County line in Fulton County.

Barnett said he found Mrs. Boles' body on the floor of the home.

Bevan Takes Turn for Better

LONDON (AP)—Doctors reported a slight improvement Sunday in the condition of Aneurin Bevan, British deputy Labor party leader who is in a hospital after a major abdominal operation.

A bulletin from Labor party headquarters said the 62-year-old politician, who underwent surgery 12 days ago, had a slightly better day.

By ROBERT L. SHAFFER

The Lorain County sheriff gave his report of six dead after a car-by-car search of the wreckage was completed shortly before midnight, about four hours after the derailment.

He said two of the passengers killed were still in one of the smashed cars.

The dead fireman was identified by the New York Central Railroad as Peter J. Lehman of Cleveland.

The veterans of Foreign Wars hall in this village of 3,000 was turned into an emergency aid center from which injured were dispatched to hospitals in Oberlin, Elyria, Norwalk and Lodi.

A New York Central spokesman, Harry Spurrier, said the train was made up of a triple diesel engine unit, followed by a post office car, a baggage car, a combination coach-baggage car; two coaches, three sleepers, and a diner at the end, which remained on the tracks.

Spurrier said his report from the train's conductor, Lewis Costin of Indianapolis, was that there were no deaths.

Margaret Taylor, an East Cleveland housewife on the third coach, said the train stopped with a wrenching, jerking crash.

"It was a terrific jolt," she added. "Baggage started falling all over the place and the lights went out. Children were crying, but nobody seemed to panic too much."

"Only one person of the 40 or 50 on my car seemed to be hurt real bad."

"Almost everyone was real scared, and most had some bruises. Our car turned at a tilting angle, something less than 45 degrees, but it still was bad."

"Then it seemed about two weeks until we all got out, but really it was only a half hour by my watch."

The railroad spokesman said

Of Propaganda at Home

(Copyright 1959, The New York Times Co.)

MOSCOW — Having determined that Communist propaganda enjoys only a "narrow sphere of influence" here, the Soviet leadership Sunday ordered major changes and expansions of all forms of internal indoctrination.

A detailed 7,000-word decision of the central committee of the Communist party expressed the Soviet leaders' deep concern about the "great and serious shortcomings" in the propaganda by which Soviet citizens are supposed to be raised and sustained. The party demanded a major campaign to educate the people "in the spirit of patriotism and national pride." This must be a serious drive, it warned, because the opponents of communism are "intensifying propaganda for the capitalist way of life."

Peaceful coexistence with other social systems, the party declared, must "not weaken the ideological struggle."

The central committee found fault with both the techniques and substance of propaganda here. It charged that "many" social scientists were "dogmatic" about propaganda. It accused a "considerable" proportion of the party, government and economic leaders of taking no part in party propaganda. And "the main reason" for failures, it said, was the half-

Georgia's Legislature is not going to make any moves to end segregation in public schools, two administration leaders indicated Sunday.

Rep. Frank Twitty of Camilla and Sen. Carl Sanders of Augusta appeared on Press Gallery, a television program sponsored this week by The Constitution.

"There is no way the legislature can pass any kind of pupil placement law without being in conflict with Georgia's constitution," Rep. Twitty said. "It takes action of the people to change the constitution."

"No taxes can be levied for anything but segregated schools," Sen. Sanders said. "The constitution can be changed only in public referendum."

Sen. Sanders said earlier on the program that it looked like "federal judges are striving to do away with public education in Georgia."

Rep. Twitty said that the Supreme Court decision was five years old and "we are still having to build schools. We are not going backwards and we will still

Vandiver
To Address Joint Body

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Georgia's General Assembly will open Monday with a heavy load of reorganization chores and high hopes of regaining its once-strong voice on appropriations.

Highlight of the first day's activities will be Gov. Vandiver's combined budget message and "State of State" address at noon.

The governor is expected to outline his reorganization bills and propose a substantial expansion of programs for school-building, mental health, highways and prisons.

EXPRESS INTEREST

Early arrivals among the legislators Sunday expressed great interest in a suggestion for compromising the complicated "allocations amendment," which has prevented the Assembly from acting on an appropriations bill since 1956.

The lawmakers saw the proposed compromise as a means for restoring the independence of the legislature.

House Floor Leader Frank Twitty, on WSB-TV's "Press Gallery" program, predicted passage of the compromise bill which Gov. Vandiver reportedly will offer.

Twitty also suggested a mandatory provision for annual appropriations acts. The idea won immediate and nearly unanimous support among his colleagues.

AMENDMENT REQUIRES

The present allocations amendment requires the Assembly, when it passes a new appropriations bill, to give the Highway depart-

The Key Issues And Predictions

The following is a rundown on key issues facing the 1960 General Assembly, with "long-shot" predictions as to the outcome of each in the course of the session:

ATLANTA'S DESEGREGATION PLAN—The plan which the Atlanta School Board drew under federal court orders will come before the Legislature. It seems extremely doubtful that the plan—based on the pupil placement idea—will receive positive action. Probably an interim study group will be created for the purpose of keeping the plan before it for one year.

HIGHWAY ALLOCATION AMENDMENT—The Gasoline and Tag Tax Allocation Amendment to the State Constitution has had the effect in recent years of preventing the enactment of an appropriations bill. There are proposals for repealing it. It seems a safe prediction, however, that there will be no outright repeal but that there will be an amendment to remove the tag tax provisions from the allocations amendment.

STATE WITHHOLDING TAX—One of the Vandiver administration's major proposals, the withholding tax plan, is designed to increase collections of state income tax. Although there is some opposition, passage seems assured.

THE REA BILL—Senate Bill 30—approved last year in the upper chamber and now before the House—would permit rural electric cooperatives to continue service from lines built in onerous areas that since have been annexed by cities. Although all efforts to date to compromise the issue have failed, a guess is that the bill will not pass in its present form. If it passes, it probably will be after some sort of settlement has been reached between opposing sides.

FIREWORKS BILL—With Georgia's present fireworks law under general attack for its "loopholes," the House passed a bill which would outlaw the sale of fireworks altogether. Prediction is that the Senate will not approve the House bill but will pass a substitute measure removing the loopholes and setting up a stricter licensing provision.

SCHOOL MEASURES—Chances are that the General Assembly will go along with a number of proposals for an across-the-board pay raise for teachers, a classroom building program and other recommendations for the strengthening of the state's educational program.

AID TO CITIES—It would appear that both Houses will give the necessary two-thirds vote to the proposal to allow the state to return part of its tax take directly to the cities. Both Gov. Vandiver and Lt. Gov. Garland Byrd are on record favoring the idea.

MENTAL HEALTH—There likely will be little or no opposition to a series of proposals designed to strengthen Georgia's mental health program and to streamline the operation of Milledgeville State Hospital.

REORGANIZATION PROGRAM—A package of reorganization bills which are the result of a year-long study by a special Economy and Reorganization Commission seems assured of passage. The proposals include a means of allowing the state to draw interest on its bank deposits, new streamlined budgetary practices, and a better means of record keeping.

Ike Regime Hit On Steel Pact

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sens. John Marshall Butler (R-Md) and J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) accused Eisenhower administration officials Sunday of forcing an inflationary steel settlement.

Without naming Vice President Nixon or Secretary of Labor Mitchell, Butler said the steel industry agreed to a new contract after it was "warned by certain high-placed men in government it otherwise might face punitive legislation."

Butler, a member of the Senate House Economic Committee, said in a statement: "Dizzy with visions of labor votes, the administration interfered with due process of arbitration and forced a settlement without serious consideration of its ultimate cost and its cumulative assault on our nation's market place."

LAST PACT SIGNED

The last of the nation's 11 big steel companies signed contracts Sunday with the union, officially writing "finis" to the longest and costliest steel dispute in U.S. history.

Steelworkers President David J. McDonald said he hoped the settlement was "symbolic of a new and lasting era of peace in our industry." He pledged his half million members to strive for that goal.

Great Lakes Steel Corp. was the last of the 11 to come to terms. Signing with the United Steelworkers a few minutes after Wheeling Steel had taken similar action. The other nine major producers had signed up previously.

LAI D DOWN TERMS

Nixon and Mitchell were credited with laying down the terms finally accepted by the companies and the union.

"Without the vice president," Mitchell said last Monday, "we would not have had a settlement."

The result was viewed as enhancing Nixon's chances for becoming the Republican presidential nominee and as pushing Mitchell along toward possible nomination as his vice presidential running mate.

State Trying to Link Carole to 'Plot'

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—An attempt will be made this week in the Finch murder trial to show redhaired Carole Tregoff joined her surgeon lover in a conspiracy to hire someone to kill Barbara Jean Finch.

Prosecutor Fred N. Whichello said he would try to show that when the plot failed, Dr. Bernard Finch shot and killed his estranged wife at their cliff-top home on the night of July 18.

The second week of testimony in the trial of Finch, 42, and Miss Tregoff, 23, on charges of murder and conspiracy opens Tuesday in the Superior Court room of Judge Walter R. Evans. A jury of six men and six women is hearing the case.

During the first week of the trial, the prosecution called as key witnesses Dr. Gerald Ridge, an autopsy surgeon, and Marie Anne Lidholm, Swedish exchange student who worked as a maid in the Finch home.

Whichello said before this week's testimony is completed, he expects to call witnesses to support charges Carole and Finch bargained with a Las Vegas man to kill Barbara Finch.

The principal witness for the prosecution is expected to be John Patrick Cody, who is now serving a sentence in Minnesota on bad check charges.

It was Cody who told the grand jury Miss Tregoff approached him to "do a job." He said he accepted about $1,300 to kill Barbara Jean Finch and received instructions on the layout of the Finch home.

But Cody told investigators he never intended to carry out the scheme.

Space 'Rivalry' Is Denounced

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The chairman of the House Space Committee said Sunday the administration's missile-space program is clouded with costly "duplication, rivalry and indecision."

The congressman, Rep. Brooks (D-La.), called on the administration to end interservice bickering over missile and space systems by establishing an "overall integrated" program directly under the defense secretary.

"If this is not done," Brooks said in a statement, "there is a danger we will find our defenses cut to an irreparable factor which will set the United States in a position for attack from any strong aggressor nation."

The Democratic congressman criticized the Defense Department for assigning development of space boosters to the Air Force while at the same time putting satellite and space vehicle operations under the various services on the basis of "primary interest or special competence."

"Such instructions," Brooks said, "foster interservice bickering, vying for development dollars and spreading development efforts and talents in so many directions that the nation will not receive full value for the dollars spent on research and development."

Brooks has already promised an "exhaustive" investigation of U.S. missile and space efforts. He will announce details at a news conference Monday. The Senate will conduct a similar broad scale inquiry.

Nasser Kicks Off Nile Dam

ASWAN, Egypt (AP)—President Nasser paid tribute Sunday to Egyptians for carrying "arms in one hand and building tools in the other."

He was addressing cheering thousands as he inaugurated the Aswan Dam hydroelectric plant 4½ miles up the Nile from the site of the projected high dam. Nasser signaled the start of work on the cherished billion-dollar dam project Saturday.

The ceremonies and Nasser's speeches were broadcast by Cairo radio and the powerful Voice of Arabs radio station. Millions heard Nasser say that by overcoming difficulties in building the dam the United Arab Republic had given "stimulus and inspiration" to the people of Africa and Asia.

Construction of the hydroelectric plant was started by a French firm before the Suez Canal was nationalized in July 1956. The work was completed by UAR engineers with the help of West Germans.

Gore Urges Bigger Senate Policy Panel

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn) called Sunday for enlargement of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee and for the election of its members by all Democratic senators.

He took sharp issue with the view attributed to Senate Democratic Leader Johnson of Texas that the Policy Committee is "an arm of the leadership."

Gore made public in advance a speech he prepared for delivery in the Senate Monday on an issue that boiled up in a conference of the 65 Democratic senators last Thursday.

At stake is the tight hold that Johnson has maintained on the party machinery in the Senate—to the dissatisfaction of some of the Democrats.

New Swastikas Blamed on 'Punks'

Splattered swastikas turned up Sunday painted on a Hollywood, Calif., synagogue, a Ypsilanti, Mich., church and Boston University's new women's dormitory. Police blamed it all on "punk kids."

The crudely dabbed signs, Hitler's distorted version of what he considered the Indian sign for rising sun, were the latest in a scattered outbreak of Nazi signs throughout the world.

At Provo, Utah, police picked up two boys, 15 and 17, when 12 downtown stores were smeared with swastikas and the word "Jew." Police found two spray cans inside the boys' car. Only two of the 12 stores were owned by persons of the Jewish faith.

San Fernando Valley, Calif., police blamed "punk kids" for eight swastikas discovered in the North Hollywood area. Two of the signs and the words "death to Jews"

Adrift on Arctic Ice Floe, Charlie 20 Eat Pizza and Await C130s

(The C130 is manufactured at Lockheed Aircraft Corp.'s Georgia division at Marietta.)

A huge, 3,500-foot long chunk of the ice island broke off Saturday night but the project officer of the scientific station said the three civilian scientists and 17 military personnel still on the island were in no immediate danger.

House Bill Would Ban News Media Monopolies

(Copyright 1960 by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—A congressional move to prohibit monopolistic control of news and other communications media in any American area will be initiated in the House of Representatives Monday.

Rep. Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn and chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, will introduce a bill designed to ban the concentration of control of a substantial portion of community radio and television broadcasting facilities. It also would prohibit a similar substantial control of news publications.

Celler said the merging of air-wave communications with press publications had created a situation in which control of news, as an example, could border on monopolistic practice. He reached this conclusion as chairman of the Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Anti-Trust Matters.

It was not the intention of Congress, the chairman held, to sanction the control of radio and TV by newspapers and magazines. But, he added, the existing communications act was "silent" on this score. He contended that there was "danger" to a free presentation of news developments in cases where substantial control rested with those who presented the news by press publications and also over the air.

He Admits Robbery of Mart Here

A man picked up for questioning in Valdosta told police he robbed an Atlanta supermarket of about $1,500 in cash and $2,500 in checks and money orders last June, officers said.

Sheriff J. L. Futch said the man is Leon Dean Phillips, 26, who lives near Hapeville. He said Phillips told him he had robbed the supermarket safe and cashed $1,159 of the money orders in Atlanta and East Point.

The sheriff said his deputies had picked up Phillips Saturday night after he aroused the suspicions of a service station operator by asking to exchange a large amount of silver coins for bills.

Atlanta police said the owner of a Green Circle Supermarket on Gordon street, SW, told them he lost about $1,300 cash and money orders from the safe last summer.

Atlanta police said Sheriff Futch told them they took a .22-caliber pistol and a .25-caliber foreign automatic from Phillips.

Legislature Faces Historic Decisions

It is a pleasure again to welcome members of the Georgia General Assembly back to Atlanta and to work with them in informing the people of their deliberations on legislative matters which will affect every citizen.

The 1960 session is fully as important—in fact, more so than last year's during which much constructive legislation was adopted and groundwork laid for basic reforms in state government. At this session we may expect the results of important studies in a number of fields to be translated into effective legislation.

The opening also marks the second year of the Vandiver administration and his developing program for modern-day Georgia. During his first year we have witnessed many splendid improvements in a number of areas, especially in bringing about greater efficiency, economical operations, in straightening out administrative tangles and in fighting corruption. With legislative help, we can expect this program to continue.

In his State-of-the-State address today, the governor will review those accomplishments of his first year. He also is expected to offer a progressive legislative program calling for improvements in services and administration of same.

The Legislature will be concerned with the reorganization program, a key platform of the administration. It appears to be ready to do something about the long-neglected problem of the mentally ill and Milledgeville State Hospital. It will be considering ways and means of better budgeting and financing additional services brought on by growth.

Members of the Assembly will learn more of the problems of cities in which much constructive legislation awaits the doing. It will get a better look at overall economic growth and problems brought on by it.

Most important of all—as it has been at every session since World War II—is the problem of education. School population still increases with no sign of a letup. Pressures on the University System continue to mount and Georgia's economy looks to the schools for trained manpower.

This year the General Assembly again must come face to face with the agonizing prospect of closing the public school system in which the people have invested hundreds of millions of dollars and want to invest more. The decision, as Federal Judge Hooper has pointed out, rests with the people through their elected representatives.

This will indeed be a historic Assembly session, one that will attract national attention. May Divine Providence give the people's representatives the courage and wisdom to make the right decisions!

Public Is Too Apathetic Toward Foreign Policy

Public apathy toward international affairs is amazing. Here's an example from Oklahoma City:

The public library there offered 40 courses dealing with a variety of subjects in its adult education program. Enrollment in a course on Russian foreign policy ranked 40th on the list while that on American foreign policy was 39th.

Similar reactions could be expected in most other U.S. cities if citizens were given a similar set of choices in an adult education program.

Such indifference is appalling in view of the fact that the advancement or even the continuation of modern civilization hinges on the effectiveness of foreign policy.

Ignorance may be bliss but such bliss could well prove to be short-lived if the vast majority of citizens keep on closing their eyes as to whether international relations improve or deteriorate.

Georgia Corn Growers Get Set To Compete

The State of Iowa may well look to its laurels. Or to its corn tassels.

Texas has taken cotton laurels from Georgia but Georgia can compete with the Midwest in corn.

One-third of Georgia crop land is committed to corn each year. In 1960, the Agricultural Extension Service proposes to push with the farmers to raise the per-acre yield and hence step up the profit.

The goal is a 40-bushel-per-acre statewide average by 1965. The goal for 32 counties taking part in a master corn production program is 60 bushels.

The per-acre yield in this state has been raised steadily over the years until it is now 32 bushels.

But 32-bushel corn will not compete on a national market. The per-bushel production cost is too high.

Farm production is like any other industry. As with the loom or the spindle, so with the acre. The greater production per unit the lower the per unit of production cost.

So the farm, like the textile mill, adopts the best methods of production. Or else goes out of business.

March of Dimes Drive Still Aims at Cripplees

The 1960 March of Dimes appeal in Georgia has gotten away to an enthusiastic start and well it should. The National Foundation and its fund-raising arm need all the financial assistance they can get.

The program now being supported by this annual appeal continues its winning fight against infantile paralysis. But its work has been extended to birth defects and arthritis, offering new hope to millions of victims. However, the new program has suffered from an unexpected development.

Last year funds which were intended for use on projects in the new war on birth defects and arthritis had to be transferred to combat the unexpected polio outbreaks which occurred in various parts of the country. More money was spent in Georgia, for instance, than was raised in last year's March of Dimes drive. Far from being used less, the facilities at Warm Springs were taxed by a surge of new cases.

So the March of Dimes is now appealing for funds to continue treatment and rehabilitation of polio victims while at the same time advancing the battle against other cripples—birth defects and arthritis.

About 250,000 children—one in 16—are born each year in this country with birth defects. There are more than 11,000,000 sufferers of one form or another of arthritis. There are still more than 50,000 victims of paralytic polio, many of whom did not receive the Salk vaccine, who are being aided by the March of Dimes.

Remember these facts when you give to the March of Dimes this year. Let's help continue the war on crippling diseases and our efforts to find the causes of birth defects.

New Science Hall Is Asset at South Georgia

Mere size and the shouting about bowl games and such make the universities stand out at the expense of the small colleges.

While the bigger units in the University System were whooping it up over the holidays, South Georgia College at Douglas dedicated a new science building.

The addition enhances the value of a good school of a kind the importance of which is already apparent as boys and girls in ever-increasing numbers seek higher education close to home.

Results of Fee System Exemplified in Charlton

The mess in Charlton County is an example of what the fee system leads to in traffic law enforcement.

Cases have been processed in which arrests were never made. As a result, Sheriff James O. Sikes and Ordinary Cecil Conner, who serves as traffic court judge, have agreed to reimburse the county a total of $2,730 from the lucrative fees they received in 1959.

It also develops that the sheriff and the judge had a cozy arrangement whereby they shared expenses involved in bringing apprehended motorists to the judge's court. They said they did so until a month ago when they discontinued such financing after receiving legal advice.

The office of sheriff and that of ordinary-traffic judge pay off handsomely in Charlton, a county of approximately 5,000 population. Records show that in 1958 the sheriff drew $37,703 in fees while the ordinary received $29,227. Those sums also approximate what each received the previous two years.

Although Charlton is not presently on the American Auto Assn.'s warning list, it and several other Georgia counties where the fee system exists have borne the reputation over a period of years as being speed traps. The stigma is likely to remain as long as the fee system is permitted.

Sikes says he favors a bill, such as that proposed by the Georgia Sheriffs Assn., to take all sheriffs off the fee system. We hope they mean what they say and will give vigorous support toward passage of such legislation.

Can We Compromise Ethical Standards And Maintain Respect for Law and Order?

Cream Ridge, N.J.—In the wake of the payola trials many Americans have been called upon to take a good look at the prevalent code of ethics. Are we to rewrite the code of ethics or make a sincere effort to adhere to the code of the past?

Let me give a hypothetical example of what is considered ethical by many people today. A lady is very proud of her collection of silverware, sheets and pillowcases which have the markings of a variety of hotels. This same lady goes into hysterics when her daughter is caught stealing a $50 article in a store.

Wouldn't it be possible to adopt a new code of ethics as to just what and in what manner stealing is considered proper? Are there certain practices which are now considered taboo which could be cloaked in a semblance of decency? Or can we compromise and still maintain respect for law and order in the land?

Can American parents berate police for ticketing them for traffic violations and still expect children to respect law enforcement officers? Are children going to have faith in a nation where the adults scream in loud voices that all politicians are crooks?

Atlantan Wants Law Banning Fireworks

Atlanta—So many irate citizens have been popping off about the fireworks that were popping off with irritating and often disastrous results during the merry Christmas holidays that our civic-minded state legislators may be spurred to putting some teeth and a bit of backbone into the law that bans the sale of fireworks except for "agricultural purposes."

Research reveals that fireworks were invented by the Chinese who popped them off to celebrate the arrival of their new year. But tradition offers no explanation of the relation of fireworks to the birth of the "Child so tender and mild" on which our observance of Christmas is allegedly based.

The use of fireworks for agricultural purposes may have some value in scaring away crows but why start scaring crows in December when the planting season is still four months distant? Heavily explosive fireworks may be effective in turning Georgia's red clay soil but any legislator who smokes a thinking man's cigar should realize that soil tilling can be accomplished more effectively with an old-fashioned mule-powered plow.

We pray that our solemn solons unite the hands of our state fire marshal by passing a sensible, meaningful law banning fireworks for all, including our agricultural enthusiasts. H.P.L.

Is Steel Settlement Inflation Prelude?

WASHINGTON—When the settlement of the steel strike was announced the Associated Press led its dispatch from Augusta by reporting that "elation enveloped the temporary White House." Sen. Dirksen, Republican leader of the Senate, greeted the agreement with ecstatic satisfaction. He said: "I'm happy, the country's happy, everybody's happy."

David McDonald and Conrad Cooper, the chief labor and industry negotiators, stated that the unions and the steel companies had accepted the terms "proposed by Vice President Nixon and Secretary of Labor Mitchell."

Secretary Mitchell declared that "without the vice president we would not have had a settlement."

The questions which I want to ask—the questions which, I think, many will want to ask, are these:

How long is this "elation" going to envelop the White House if it proves that this wage settlement is the forerunner of price rises throughout the steel industry? Is the country going to be as "happy" as Dirksen says it is if another wage-price spiral has been touched off by administrative pressure on the negotiators?

It is premature to say the agreement is inflationary, that it represents a new wage spiral which will inevitably produce a new price spiral. But it is also premature to say that it won't.

There is anxious and ominous evidence that the settlement may be inflationary. The final agreement represents a package increase embracing all benefits of about 39 cents spread out over a 30-month period. Up to the time of the settlement the industry spokesmen said that their last offer—a package coming to 30 cents—was as high as the industry could go without forcing up prices. If the steel industry was right in this contention, then price rises have to be expected. And they would not be confined to the steel industry since steel is a major component of so much of our production.

President Eisenhower has contended from the first that a wrong kind of settlement—an inflationary settlement—would be hurtful to the country as a whole. His appeal was that both sides recognize the overriding public stake in a settlement which would arrest, not abet, the wage-price spiral.

The steel negotiations represented a symbolic test of the country's determination to prevent a new round of wage-price inflation.

We do not yet know whether the settlement which has just been announced passes that test. We cannot know until we see what impact the wage agreement exerts on other wage negotiations. We cannot know until we see whether the settlement brings steel price increases to be passed on to other manufacturers who will pass them on to the consumer.

It would be well to wait a while before being so pleased—and before counting the political benefits.

'Wesleyan Will Be In Capable Hands'

The trustees of Wesleyan College couldn't have found a better man to be president of that rare and fine institution than Dr. W. Earl Strickland. He possesses the qualifications, abilities and character which will blend perfectly with the high purposes and honored traditions of that wonderful college.

Being the husband of Thelma has been his best training. She is lovely and cultured and has had much to do with making Earl the minister he is. His next best training has come through being the father of three daughters—Patricia, Ellen and Margaret. From them he has learned much that the president of a girls' college needs to know.

Last year I was preaching for Earl in a revival. One night just before time for the service a phone call came with the news that little Margaret had been in an automobile accident. She was visiting relatives in Gainesville.

He loved his church and was deeply interested in the revival but immediately he told me I could run the service that night because he was going to see about his little girl.

Of course, any father would have done that and that is exactly the kind of a man a college president should be. He will be deeply interested in all the matters pertaining to the institution—raising money, building buildings, administration—but his first interest will be in the well-being of each one of those students.

Being a scholar himself, he will

Scalp-Tickler, Cat Made Short Circuit

A nice lady named Mrs. Hasson wrote me to say that if I thought that cat Figaro caused a rumpus when the vet tried to take his temperature, I should have been at her house the night her cat got tangled up with her husband's scalp-tickler.

Her husband, she said, was beginning to lose his hair, which did not suit him, so he bought some kind of little gadget which was supposed to stimulate circulation in the scalp. It was a skullcap kind of thing, with little wires in it like an electric blanket and every night her husband would put it on his head and plug it in at the wall socket and lie there letting the electricity stimulate his hair follicles so his hair would not fall out.

This night, it seems, they had just gone to bed and turned out the light and were just about to drop off to sleep, with Mr. H. wearing this thing on his head, when Mrs. Hasson's black cat

Charcoal jumped up on the bed seeking a place to bed down for the night. And somehow the cat's tail touched Mrs. H's ear just about the same time the cat sniffed at the gadget on Mr. Hasson's head and being a black cat, which as everybody knows is full of electricity anyway, this caused a short circuit or something. Anyway, all of a sudden the room was full of blue sparks and Mr. Hasson was leaping and yelling that he was being electrocuted and Mrs. Hasson was yelling that she was being stabbed, for the departing cat had sunk his claws in her person and the cat was yowling and screeching down the hall as if pursued by fiends.

No great harm was done. The cat came back after a few days and Mrs. Hasson's wounds healed up and so far as I know Mr. Hasson has got a fine head of hair. But the cat does not sleep with them a more.

Which reminds me of a little story I printed in this month in the Georgia National Guardsman:

Neighbor: "Is your son hard to get out of bed in the morning?"

Friend: "No. I just open the door and throw the cat on his bed."

Neighbor: "How does that wake him up?"

Friend: "He sleeps with the dog."

Some Saddened By Being Merry

Have you recovered from Christmas? What a question! What a condemnation on common sense and conviction that we should ask that question seriously, knowing that Christmas as we live it is a stress and that many haven't recovered even yet. The idea is not just my own. The doctors see the evidence. Four of them in Utah got together and wrote an article opining that Christmas strains make the season unhappy for many mainly because they work so hard at being merry.

Which may account for a request the Georgia Heart Assn. received the week after:

"Dear Sir: Will you please send me some information on health in general? Please send on any subject or disease. Thank you."

JEST FOR TODAY: Speaking of strain: "How could Bill land in the hospital just from running through a screen door?"

"He strained himself."

I LIKE THIS: "It's a scene to tell a lie. Ask any husband."

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:

♠ K 7 3 ♠ Q 10 6 ♠ A 10 5 ♠ K Q 9 8

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. A return to three no trump would be improper. Partner has announced an unbalanced hand and a spade preference is clearly indicated with your holding. North could hardly expect better trump support in light of your failure to raise spades directly, and the delayed raise could easily serve to lay the groundwork for a slam try if partner has the required values.

Q. 3—As South you hold:

♠ A 9 8 6 4 2 ♠ K 3 ♠ 9 ♠ A J 10 8

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—There may or may not be a good play for game in spades, depending upon the quality of partner's raise. The way to clarify the situation is by a bid of three spades, placing the responsibility squarely upon partner. Note your hand had an original valuation of 15 points but, now that spades have been supported, you add one point for the fifth spade and two for the sixth, giving you an adjusted value of 18 points.

Q. 4—As South you hold:

♠ 7 2 ♠ 8 6 5 3 ♠ A K 9 2 ♠ A J 4

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—A distinct effort should be made to reach game and the indicated rebid is two no trump. While it is true that you have no heart stopper, if the hand is otherwise suitable, responder may probe for game in no trump, even though he lacks protection in one suit.

Q. 5—As South you hold:

♠ K Q 9 6 2 ♠ K J 9 4 ♠ 6 ♠ 7 4 2

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid?

A.—Despite the fact that you have spades very well stopped and protection in hearts, it would be highly improper for you to try two no trump. With a partner who is in position to make a mere overcall, you cannot even remotely visualize a game. There is nothing, therefore, for you to do but pass.

Q. 6—As South you hold:

♠ 9 7 4 ♠ K 7 2 ♠ A J 10 8 7 3 ♠ 4

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
Pass 3 ♠ Double Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a very powerful hand when it is considered that partner realizes he may be forcing a bid from you at the level of four. The proper procedure is to make an immediate bid of five diamonds, one more than necessary to give a picture of the strength that your hand contains.

Q. 2—As South you hold:

♠ K 10 7 5 3 ♠ A J 10 7 2 ♠ A ♠ A 5

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Despite partner's announcement of a mediocre holding we would be inclined to insist upon a game contract. If partner has a preference for one of the major suits there should be a good chance, because of the highly favorable distribution. It is true that if partner's strength is entirely in the minor suits, the chance will not be good and a slight loss may be incurred. But we can't be right on every hand and the chance for game justifies assumption of the risk. The suggested bid, therefore, is three hearts.

Q. 7—As South you hold:

♠ 7 3 3 ♠ K 6 2 ♠ J 4 ♠ K Q 10 6 2

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Double Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's double of one no trump should always be passed on the slightest excuse. You have plenty of excuses. Prepare to rake in the chips.

Q. 8—Opponent opens with one club and you hold:

♠ K J 10 7 4 ♠ A 8 6 4 ♠ K 7 5 3

What do you bid?

A.—This hand has splendid offensive possibilities and may well produce a game in the best suit though partner may have a below average hand. The best way to portray this strength is by a take-out double. A mere one spade overcall will not do justice to your holding and partner may fail to act with just enough values for your purposes.

Symington Minimizes Primaries

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Symington of Missouri, mentioned as a possible compromise for the Democratic nomination, said Sunday he "certainly would" like to be elected President next November.

Symington also left the door open to the possibility that he might become an avowed candidate and enter some preferential primaries in the battle for his party's top honor. But he said he was not an avowed candidate now.

Symington, appearing on the television program "Meet the Press," (NBC), made clear that he did not consider primaries of great importance in the selection of a president. He said he had decided not to enter any but then added the qualification, "at least at this time."

He also said he was not actively seeking delegates who would support him at the Democratic national convention, again adding "at this time."

Asked whether he would like to be President in 1960, Symington, former Air Force secretary under President Truman and a member of the Senate since 1952, said, "I certainly would." He added that anyone in politics would like to be promoted to the White House.

Symington often has been mentioned as a possible compromise if the Democratic convention deadlocked between other candidates.

Refugee Kills Girl, Self in Car

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI). "Death is the only way out."

These words were contained in a tragic note left behind by a Hungarian refugee and a 17-year-old high school girl who were found dead Saturday night in a car in nearby Franklin Township.

Police said the man shot and killed the girl, then killed himself. Notes he left behind in Hungarian indicated that they were in love and that her parents had objected to the romance.

SHOT TWICE

Police identified the dead lovers as Istvan Szucs, 27, of Woodbridge, and Carol Olson, 17, a senior at Woodbridge High School.

Carol had been shot twice, once through the heart and once through the upper chest, while Szucs was shot once through the heart. She was found with her head cradled in his arms. The shootings occurred two to four days ago, police said.

Both had died from .32-caliber bullets and a .32-caliber revolver lay on the floor of the car, police said.

NOTES LEFT

Police said one note left behind read in part:

"Death is the only way out."

"The two of us agreed to do it together, to go on this road from which there is no turning back."

"In case of love, you don't recognize death."

"Death won out."

"If she can't be mine, she isn't going to be any other man's either."

Halt of Nuclear Explosions Shows Up in Thyroid Tests

MEMPHIS, Tenn (UPI)—A University of Tennessee physiologist said Sunday the 14th-month ban on nuclear explosions by this country and Russia has shown up in tests on humans and animals.

Dr. Lester Van Middlesworth said the amount of radio-active iodine found in human and animal thyroid glands has fallen off to 1/1,000th of what it was during the nuclear testing period.

Dr. Van Middlesworth said the Atomic Energy Commission pays transportation fees for samples flown to him from four continents.

He tests from two to four thousand thyroids a year and forwards his results monthly to the AEC.

Dr. Van Middlesworth said his tests enable him to detect an atomic explosion within two weeks of its occurrence and also permit a rough guess as to where the explosion took place.

Woman Professor Found Slain

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)—A woman professor was found clubbed to death here early Sunday on a lonely road near the Mississippi River. Sheriff Byran Clemmons identified her as Dr. Rosamond McMillan, 39, a professor of botany at Louisiana State University, New Orleans branch.

"From the position of her body, plus the fact that she had a book of matches in one hand and a cigaret package in the other, it appears that she was clubbed in the head as she stood talking to someone," Clemmons said.

"She was struck repeatedly on the head with a sharp instrument. She must have been talking to the person when he began hitting her," he said. "There was money in her purse, so that eliminates the possibility of robbery."

Heiress, Chauffeur Cross on Same Ship

NEW YORK (AP)—Police said Sunday that missing debutante Gamble Benedict arrived in Belgium Saturday on a freighter that left here Dec. 31.

The 18-year-old heiress to the Remington typewriter fortune had been missing since Dec. 27.

Investigators also learned that a chauffeur, Andre Turimbeau, was on the same ship with her.

Earlier, police had theorized that the girl may have eloped with a man twice her age.

Her grandmother, Katherine Geddes Benedict, who notified police a week after the disappearance, said at the time the girl might have left the country with an older man she had been dating since last August.

Miss Benedict had been seen here several times since she disappeared from her fashionable home on Manhattan's Upper East Side. She had been seen in the company of a man about 35 years old who spoke with a foreign accent.

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

New York, N. Y. (Special).—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations. Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place. And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months! In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body. This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H.* Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug counters. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. *Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Safecrackers Get $2,000, Narcotics

Lock Boxes of Drug Store,
3 Other Firms Ripped Open

Safecrackers stole an estimated $2,000 in cash and a quantity of narcotics Sunday in the burglary of a drug store at Highland avenue and Lanier boulevard, NE. The safe of a delicatessen in the same block and safes at two other locations were also broken open.

Police listed the narcotics as 750 tablets of morphine and dilaudid, worth more than $1,500 in the illicit market.

Lt. Clinton Chafin said the current price for morphine among dope peddlers here is about $2 a tablet and as much as $3 for dilaudid.

BRACE AND BIT USED

The narcotics and the money were taken from a ripped-open safe at Shackelford Drugs, 1411 N. Highland Ave., NE.

William F. Shackelford, owner, said the safe contained two days' sales receipts, which he estimated amounted to approximately $2,000. He said the exact amount of the money loss would not be known until his bookkeeper makes an inventory Monday.

Police said the drug store was entered by a hole cut in the roof with a brace and bit.

DELICATESSEN HIT

Safecrackers also struck Stanley's Highland Delicatessen, in the same block.

Police said Stanley Friedman, operator of the delicatessen, came in Sunday and found his safe had been ripped open and its contents removed. The loss was not immediately determined.

Safes also were opened in the Anchorage Club in the Clairmont Hotel on Ponce de Leon avenue, and the office of Minit Car Wash, Inc., 306 Techwood Dr., NW. The amounts taken in these places also were undetermined.

Baptists Open Push For College

Metropolitan Atlanta Baptists launched a $3 million building fund campaign for the Atlanta Baptist College here Sunday.

Special sermons on the theme of Christian higher education were delivered in all of the metropolitan area Baptist churches Sunday morning.

Sunday afternoon, Dr. William Richardson White, president of Baylor College, addressed leaders of the Atlanta Baptist Sunday School Association at the First Baptist Church.

The college campaign building fund is being sponsored by the Atlanta Baptist Association. Advance gifts of $517,696 had been received prior to Sunday's kick-off.

The college will be located on a 464-acre tract of land on the northeast leg of the expressway, 12 miles from downtown Atlanta. The institution, slated to open Sept. 1, 1961, will be coeducational and will offer courses in the liberal arts.

Impassive 'Gator Activates 2 Girls

By FRANK WELLS

Cathy's eyes were big as saucers. So were Eva Mae's.

"Well, I saw him first and I thought he was a stuffed thing—you know, like a toy," Cathy was a little breathless. She turned to Eva Mae for confirmation.

"Yes, and then I saw him move," Eva Mae squealed just a little in telling about it.

What they saw move was a 29-inch alligator, and they couldn't prove he was alive, because Mack Bruton, 18, caught him after the little girls ran screaming home from their play on a creek bank in College Park. Cathy is 6 and Eva Mae is 9.

"I went down to the creek and we put a stick on his head. Then I caught him behind the head and picked him up. I wasn't scared until I got to thinking about how I was going to turn him loose. Then I got a little worried," Mack said.

But they got the 'gator, all 29 inches of him, into a crocus sack and took him to the zoo.

Cathy is Cathy Slaton and Eva Mae is Eva Mae Allgry, near whose home on Callaway street they found the gator. S. W. Allgry, Eva Mae's father, helped handle the sacked-up 'gator on his trip to the city.

The 'gator didn't seem bothered much—one way or the other.

Token Integration a Must, Dixie City Leaders Think

Officials and leaders of southern cities which have dealt with the integration problem have agreed for the most part, that some form of token integration is mandatory, WSB newsmen Aubrey Morris said Sunday.

Summing up his interview with representatives from four states, Morris said:

"The traditional pattern of segregated schools throughout the South is beginning to crumble under the weight of the 1954 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court."

Among those interviewed was Gov. Faubus of Arkansas, who said the people must rule in a democracy, but charged the federal government with overstepping its bounds in the school situation. Faubus said he had not stood in the way of integration in Arkansas "where the people wanted it and made the decision themselves."

PUBLISHER QUOTED

Elsewhere in Arkansas, Hugh Patterson, publisher of the Arkansas Gazette, said "We prefer a minimum of integration to no public schools at all."

In Front Royal, Va., school Supt. Q. D. Gasquey said "no state can prosper ... without its public schools, and in view of the Supreme Court decision I see no way of operating public schools on a segregated basis."

The superintendent of schools in Charlotte, N.C., Dr. Elmer Garinger, declared "We must control our emotions and think of the community. We must not allow anyone to do away with our public schools."

Negroes in Charlotte expressed different views. Thomas H. Wytch, a lawyer and NAACP official, said "We feel the pupil placement act is unconstitutional, and we are trying to get a case in the courts so a ruling can be made on the plan."

URGED RESTRAINT

But Dr. J. S. N. Trose, editor of the Charlotte Post, a Negro publication, has urged Negroes to avoid unnecessary haste.

In Montgomery, Ala., Carl H. Alexander Jr., chairman of the Montgomery Citizens Council, said children are being made "pawns in a political battle. Therefore, we are preparing ourselves for an all-out fight."

The drive from the farm took an hour and 45 minutes. Shortly before leaving the farm the President and his wife visited with their four grandchildren. They live with their parents, Maj. and Mrs. John Eisenhower in a home at one corner of the President's farm.

3 Atlantans Jailed On Robbery Charge

Three Atlantans were behind bars Sunday night on robbery and burglary charges less than 30 minutes after an elderly junk dealer was slugged with a crowbar and robbed of about $300 by four bandits.

The robbery victim was Thomas Cornelius Hunt, 66, who operates a junk shop in a garage at the rear of his home at 821 Crew St., Southeast.

Hunt suffered a head laceration while he was being treated at Grady Hospital, police captured three of four men who ran when their car was stopped at a roadblock not far from the robbery scene, officers said.

Hunt later identified the three men from a police lineup, officers said.

The suspects were identified as Frank Delano Shelton, 23, of 804 Ashland Ave., NE; Clifford Columbus Wainwright, 25, of 1458 Boulevard Dr., NE, and Joe Herbert Sellers, 21, of 160 Rogers St., Northeast.

Sgt. J. H. Barnes and Detective N. W. Flanagan said the suspects admitted the crimes.

Hunt said the men came to his home and offered to sell him some nails. Later, he said, they asked to see a crowbar. He showed them one and they asked for a smaller one. While he was bending over, he said, he was hit on the head.

Police Sgt. C. B. Dickerson stopped the car and nabbed Sellers while the other three fled on foot. Patrolman C. P. Hicks caught Wainwright, and Detective "Buster" Felder and Patrolman J. L. Morrow later picked up Shelton.

5 Overcome By Fire at Valdosta

VALDOSTA — Fire swept through a northside shopping center here early Sunday, destroying three stores and damaging three others before firemen brought the flames under control.

The City Fire Department estimated the damage at $100,000.

Five firemen were overcome by smoke and heat during the three-hour fight against the fire and were hospitalized. Four of the men were released Sunday afternoon but Asst. Fire Chief H. L. Brady still was confined to the hospital.

Fire Chief Ernest Caswell said the fire apparently started in a paint store located in the Park Shopping Center and exploding cans of paint spread the flames.

The paint store, a toy shop and a beauty salon were destroyed by the roaring flames.

Governor's Address To Open Session

ment all gasoline and tag tax receipts.

Since the 1956 act, those receipts have increased so much that a new act would mean giving highways $22 million more. Vandiver has said such a shift would wreck the state's other programs, such as education.

The reported compromise would remove the tag tax receipts provision from the constitution. It would result in reducing the Highway department's credit from about $22 million to about $5 million.

Some representatives Sunday still opposed any change in the allocations program. Rep. Spencer Johnson of Butts County called on the state to give the highway program its full due and enact more taxes if necessary for other agencies.

Others, such as Rep. Bob Andrews of Hall, still hold out for outright repeal of the amendment.

VICTORY INDICATED

But indications were that the governor's compromise will win the necessary two-thirds majority.

Rep. George T. Bagby, speaker pro tem, strongly endorsed Twitty's proposal for annual appropriations. He recalled that Vandiver had campaigned on restoration of legislative independence.

But allocations will not be the only knotty problem facing the legislature.

Gov. Vandiver will ask adoption of an income tax withholding law. Though there is considerable opposition, the bill is expected to pass.

The governor also will submit a raft of bills endorsed by the Commission on Economy and Reorganization, including a plan for the state to earn interest on deposits of its idle funds.

Schools will be very much in the limelight.

Proposals for increasing the school-building bond program and for granting $200-a-year raises to teachers are expected to win easy passage.

HEADED FOR DEFEAT

But plans by Fulton and DeKalb lawmakers to win legislative approval of the Atlanta School Board's pupil placement plan are headed for sure defeat.

It is expected, however, that the legislature will authorize a commission to make a thorough study of the state's school segregation laws.

The toughest fight of the session may come over the "REA" bill, already passed by the Senate. It provides that rural electric co-ops may continue to operate in areas annexed into cities. It is opposed by the utility companies and Georgia Municipal Association.

Twitty indicated Sunday a last-minute compromise may be in the works. Lawmakers are almost evenly divided at present.

Mental health also will receive considerable attention by the lawmakers, most of whom have visited the Milledgeville State Hospital during the past year.

A completely revised commitment law will be offered, and the governor is expected to ask more bond funds for mental hospital facilities.

The longest bill to be considered by the Assembly will be a new insurance code, which for the sake of time-saving will be read into the record by clerks Monday and Tuesday.

Legislators predicted that if many amendments to the new Vandiver Expected To End Tax on Goods Sold to U.S.

Gov. Vandiver is expected to issue an executive order Monday suspending collection of the state sales tax on goods sold to the U.S. government.

The report came from Rep. J. B. Fuqua of Richmond County, who said his information came in turn from Revenue Commissioner Dixon-Oxford.

The governor's executive order results from a decision handed down Friday by the State Supreme Court. The high court held that retailers must pay the 3 per cent tax on sales to the U.S. if the federal government does not pay it.

Immediately following the decision, there was speculation that a bill would be offered in the code are offered, it may run into trouble. They are hoping for early passage.

Georgia's municipalities are hopeful of winning passage of a constitutional amendment which would allow the state to give financial aid to towns and cities. The governor has given it his blessings and easy passage is predicted.

But a real row could develop over a bill proposing that all practicing lawyers in Georgia be members of a new bar association.

Cancel Bonds To Cut Debt?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. Wright Patman (D-Tex.) said Sunday he will introduce a bill Monday to cancel 15 billion dollars worth of government bonds held by the Federal Reserve. Patman said his bill would have the effect of reducing the national debt subject to the legal debt ceiling by 15 billion dollars.

Here're Wheels Most Likely To Crank Out Legislation

The following men will play probably the most important roles in the complex legislative drama which begins its annual run here Monday. They are the key leaders of the Senate and House:

Byrd

GARLAND T. BYRD—As lieutenant governor, he is presiding officer of the Georgia Senate. He is 35 years old, a native of Taylor County and an attorney. He has the power of recognizing senators to speak on bills, of shutting off irrelevant debate at his discretion and of casting the deciding vote when an equal number of senators have voted for and against a measure. He is also chairman of the Senate Rules Committee.

FRANK S. TWITTY—He is Gov. Vandiver's floor leader in the House and, as such, is charged with lining up votes in favor of the governor's legislative program. A veteran of many years service in the House, he is 52, an attorney in Camilla and represents Mitchell County. He is vice chairman of the House Rules Committee.

Culpepper

ROBERT E. L. CULPEPPER JR.—He succeeded Sen. Sanders as the administration floor leader at the close of the last session. In addition to representing his own 7th District, the Camilla attorney will be the key man in pushing Gov. Vandiver's legislative program through the upper house. He holds membership on a number of the Senate's most powerful committees, including Rules. He is 50 years old.

GEORGE L. SMITH II—As speaker of the House of Representatives, he is one of the most powerful influences in the General Assembly. Presiding over the House, he, like the lieutenant governor in the Senate, recognizes representatives to speak on bills and may shut off irrelevant debate at his pleasure. He, too, casts the deciding vote in case of a tie and is chairman of the House Rules Committee. From Swainsboro (Emanuel County), he is 47 years old and an attorney.

Smith

CARL E. SANDERS—He is president pro tem of the Senate, and as such, presides in the absence of the lieutenant governor. When not presiding he may, of course, participate in debate and vote on measures before the Senate. He was elected president pro tem at the end of the 1959 session, having served during that time as the governor's floor leader. From Augusta, 34-year-old Sen. Sanders represents the 18th Senatorial District. He is an attorney.

GEORGE T. BAGBY—He is speaker pro tem of the House and presides over that body in the absence of the speaker. When he is in the chair, he holds the same powers as the speaker. When not presiding, he, like the president pro tem of the Senate, may participate in debate and vote for or against matters before the House. A Dallas attorney, Rep. Bagby represents Paulding County. He is 39 years old.

Floor Post No. 2 for Underwood

Rep. Joe Underwood of Montgomery County will serve as assistant floor leader of the House in the 1960 General Assembly.

The announcement will be made Monday by Floor Leader Frank Twitty.

Underwood, a lawyer, is a political independent, but he has been closely associated with the Vandiver administration.

During the past year he has been a member of the Governor's Commission on Economy and Reorganization, on which he served as chairman of the Health and Welfare subcommittee.

A member of the House for the past three terms, Underwood is a native of Mount Vernon.

Underwood is chairman of the Local Affairs committee, chairman of the subcommittee on industrial loans of the Banks and Banking committee, a member of the Rules committee and of the committee on Privileged Resolutions.

Prince Charles Host At Cocktail Party?

LONDON (UPI)—Prince Charles, 11-year-old heir to the British throne, held his first cocktail party last week, a London Sunday newspaper said Sunday.

The Empire News said the party was for adults at Sandringham castle and was complete with beer and spirits.

With the queen's consent, Prince Charles ordered the drinks from the cellar and supervised the preparation of food.

The young prince had one drink himself—a tall iced glass of orange drink, the newspaper said.

Here's How Bills Become Laws in General Assembly

By GENE BRITTON

What, exactly, do legislators do when they make their 40-day jaunt to Atlanta every January?

They make laws, of course.

But lawmaking is a long, rather complicated process. Each bill that becomes a law has its own particular career. But generally this is the way it works:

Most bills may originate in either the House of Representatives or the Senate. The exception is bills dealing with appropriations or the raising of revenue. Such bills must originate in the House.

Lawmakers Shun Pupil Placement

(This amendment becomes effective every time the legislature passes any new appropriations bill.)

"If we can get the amendment to the amendment through, we could have a new appropriations bill next year (1961)," Rep. Twitty said.

Both Twitty and Sanders agreed that the act of appropriating state money belongs in the hands of the legislature and that an appropriations bill should be passed each year.

Discussing the up-coming REA bill—expected to be one of the points of controversy in the new legislature—Rep. Twitty said he believed the matter could be settled by compromise.

(Rural Electrification co-ops want to continue serving customers on their lines after these customers have been taken into the city limits of municipalities. The municipalities want the right to serve these customers under existing city franchises.)

"Perhaps the answer would be to leave the lines now in existence where they are, but have no further expansion," Rep. Twitty said.

Twitty and Sanders did not put any dollar figure on the building program which the governor is expected to ask for in his speech to the legislature Monday. However, they explained that the issuance of bonds for construction of schools and other buildings is a different story from the issuance of bonds for the construction of rural roads.

"If you build a road that will last only five years and issue bonds that will take 16 years to repay to pay for that road, it is not good business," Sen. Sanders said. "However, a building can last for a hundred or more years and will be here long after the bonds are retired."

Both lawmakers were in the forefront of the fight to defeat former Governor Marvin Griffin's efforts to issue bonds to construct rural roads.

Both predicted passage of the "withholding bill"—an act which would permit the collection of state income taxes by payroll deductions.

"This is no new tax, but it is a method of collection which would bring additional revenue into the state treasury," Rep. Twitty said. "Some have advocated another penny sales tax, but to my way of thinking this would not be fair. We are not going to have any tax increase this session of the legislature."

Rep. Twitty also predicted that money will be available for the proposed program of mental health without the necessity of putting a tax on soft drinks as has been proposed.

Both men were high in their praise of Ernest Vandiver's first year in office as governor.

"Gov. Vandiver has restored the faith of the people in state government, just as he said he would," Rep. Twitty said.

The lawmakers were questioned by George Boswell, associate editor of The Constitution, and Bruce Galphin, political writer. Ralph McGill, editor, acted as moderator.

Flint Panel Pushes School Segregation

MACON (AP)—The Flint River Citizens Council Sunday adopted a resolution urging the Legislature to keep Georgia schools segregated and open.

The resolution also said the council would rather see the public schools closed than integrated.

The resolution was one of two adopted at what was described as the first statewide rally of the Citizens Council. About 100 persons attended the meeting in a Macon building.

The second resolution called on the Legislature to pass a bill to label blood in hospital blood banks as to race.

Ezra Johnson of Columbus, executive director of the council, warned the group against the dangers of complacency and

But, for example, consider a hypothetical bill sponsored by hypothetical Rep. Richard Roe of Home County. Rep. Roe writes his bill (frequently with the assistance of the Office of the Legislative Counsel) and introduces it. The Roe Bill is then said to be in the House "hopper".

It must be read by the clerk of the House to the membership of that body once a day for three separate days. For the first two readings, the clerk may read only the title of the bill. At the third reading, the clerk reads the bill in full.

Between the first and second readings, the speaker of the House assigns the bill to whichever standing committee is concerned with the general subject matter of the bill. The committee members meet to study it.

If the Roe Bill contains something the committee wants more information on, the committee chairman may name a subcommittee to make a more detailed study. Once the full committee has completed its study the members vote on whether to "report this bill out with a recommendation that it do pass". Without such a recommendation, the bill is killed in committee.

ASSIGNED TO CALENDAR

If the bill is reported "do pass", it is ready for its second and third readings on separate days. The speaker of the House assigns the bill to the House calendar for consideration.

When it is called, Rep. Roe stands before his fellow representatives, tells them what the bill is about and urges its passage. He may have lined up other representatives to speak in favor of his bill. On the other hand, there may be opposition to the bill, and if so, it is debated before the House by Rep. Roe and his supporters and the opponents of the bill.

Once debate is concluded, the members of the House vote "aye" for passage or "no" for defeat of the bill.

GOES TO SENATE

If the House approves the Roe Bill, it is transmitted to the Senate where the whole process starts over again. Again the bill is read three times, this time in the Senate. It is assigned to a committee of the Senate, considered and either reported "do pass" or "do not pass."

If it is reported favorably, the lieutenant governor (who presides over the Senate) schedules it on the calendar and when its time comes the Roe Bill is discussed or debated before the Senate.

When the bill is before either house, it may be amended. Or, if the Senate disagrees with the House version of the bill, it may offer a substitute bill. (This process may also take place in committee.) If the House does not agree with the Senate amendment or substitute bill, the presiding officers of both houses appoint a conference committee to work out a compromise.

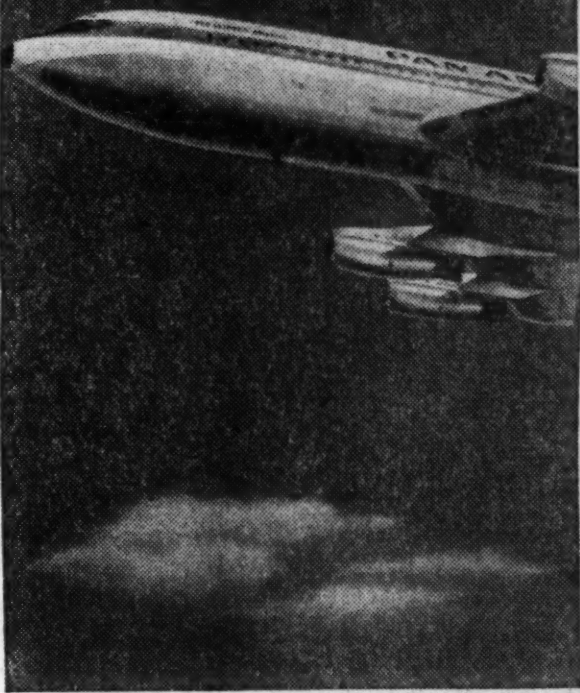

SENT TO GOVERNOR

Once the Roe Bill has been approved in both legislative chambers, it is sent to the governor for his signature. If he signs it, it becomes law. If he does not favor the Roe Bill, he may veto it. Both House and Senate must again approve the bill by a two-thirds vote in order to override a gubernatorial veto.

The governor must sign or veto bills sent to him within five days after he receives them or they become law with or without his approval. If the General Assembly should adjourn before the five days are up, he has 30 days in which to sign or veto bills.

PASTOR MARKS 31ST ANNUAL WEDDING BELLS SERVICE

Dr. Robert Burns (C), with Couples He Married, (L to R) Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Handy, 1959; Mr. and Mrs. Sam P. Jones, 1933

Dr. Burns Stresses '60 Events In Wedding Bells Sermon

Nineteen-sixty will be "a year of great opportunity and testing," Dr. Robert Burns said Sunday in his 31st annual Wedding Bells sermon at Peachtree Christian Church.

Addressing a congregation of couples whose marriages he has performed during his ministry, Dr. Burns said the events of 1960 "will separate the weak from the strong, the immature from the mature and the disloyal from the loyal. . . . It will require a thoughtful examination of all around us."

He said he is thankful to be living in Georgia now and thankful that "God has matched us with an hour and occasion such as this."

Using as his text a phrase from the Book of Ruth, "Entreat me not to leave thee," Dr. Burns said the Book of Ruth was originally written as a political pamphlet to challenge the strong racial prejudice which the Jews felt for the Moabites and other tribes. He stressed the loyalty of Naomi, the dark-skinned Moabite, toward Ruth, her Jewish mother-in-law.

"Nothing can exist well for long without loyalty," said Dr. Burns. Dr. Burns' sermon high-lighted the Wedding Bells service, which is held annually at the Peachtree Christian Church on the second Sunday in January. The sermon was televised on WSB-TV.

As pastor of the church, Dr.

Burns has performed thousands of weddings and is nationally known for his work in marital and premarital counseling.

The Truth About Psychiatry

It Requires Much Teamwork To Rehabilitate the Mentally Ill

By DR. BERNARD HOLLAND With JACK NELSON

Copyright 1960, The Atlanta Constitution. Who are the members of a hospital's psychiatric team and how do they work with the patient?

The entire staff consists of psychiatrists, nurses, nursing assistants, social workers, psychologists, occupational therapists and ancillary personnel. Each member of the team works with the patient in a somewhat different capacity, but they all have the same goal—to help the patient.

The psychiatrist is the team leader. He is an administrator, a coordinator and a therapist. Administrative policies have a direct effect on therapy.

The open-door policy is part of administration. There are some patients, however, who need the controlled structure of the ward. These patients need someone to set limits for them.

The administration must decide which patients can go and come at their own discretion and which ones still need controls. This decision is comparable to the decision the medical doctor makes about whether a patient can get out of bed.

ILLNESS CONSIDERED In both situations, the individual's illness and strength must be considered. The psychiatrist depends on the remainder of the staff to provide adequate observations and information about the patient's progress in order to make his decisions.

When a patient is admitted, the psychiatrist, with the help of the other members of the staff, determines the patient's problems and decides what treatment is necessary. The staff provide information and observations of the patient's behavior and they express ideas about how they think the patient should be treated.

It is up to the psychiatrist to make the decisions concerning therapy and then coordinate the activities of all staff members treating the patient.

Each patient is seen two to three times per week by a psychiatrist for individual therapy which has been described earlier.

(It should be emphasized here that this discussion concerns an adequately staffed mental hospital with an adequate treatment program. Of course, most patients in some of the woefully understaffed state hospitals, such as Milledgeville State Hospital, hardly ever see a psychiatrist for individual therapy.)

CHILDREN LEARN

The role of the nurse with her patients is essentially that of a mother to a child. Through activities of daily living the nurse relates to her patients and demonstrates that she cares for them.

Not by telling them so, but by her activities.

Children learn that they are loved by the fact that meals are ready, that their clothes are clean and that they are protected. Patients on a psychiatric ward gain the same sense of security for very similar reasons. The nurse sees that their needs for food, clean clothes and sleep are met. She may participate with patients in various forms of recreation such as checkers, tennis, bridge, ping pong or just walking.

The important thing is not the activity, but the relationship that develops. Through close relationships the patient learns there are people who care about him and want to help him.

AIDES HAVE ROLE

It is an accepted fact that mothers have the predominant influence on the child. A mother spends many more hours with her child than the father. In a psychiatric ward, the nurse is with the patient most of the time; the psychiatrist only a few hours a week. Because of the amount of time spent and the possibility for influence, it is essential that nurses be warm, giving, understanding people who are not afraid to express their feelings.

Nursing assistants, sometimes called aides, or attendants, are either men or women, but have essentially the same role as the nurse. Traditionally they have stood around, guarded patients and herded them from one place to another. On a recent survey it was found that because of the nature of their duties, they spend more time with patients than any other member of the team. For this reason they too should be warm, motherly or fatherly, understanding people.

The ability to express one's feelings freely and to accept the feelings of others easily is perhaps the most important quality for a nurse or nursing assistant to have. Patients are keenly sensitive to the feelings of staff members.

If staff members are accepting and warm, patients feel secure and comfortable; if patients are unsure of staff members' feelings toward them, their anxiety is increased. For example:

When David Jackson began cursing at everyone in his hospital ward, some of the staff members felt he should be punished by restricting him from gym activities. One day the nurse and nursing assistants discussed how his behavior should be handled, but no definite decision was reached.

That evening, one of the nurses who thought he should be punished restricted him from swimming for cursing. The night nurse reported during rounds the next morning that David had become extremely upset, threatened several of the staff members, kicked the furniture and refused to go to bed.

Finally, at 4 o'clock in the morning, after hours of pacing and two doses of a tranquilizer, he went to sleep.

The psychiatrist pointed out that by restricting him in a small matter such as cursing, the staff was treating him the same way his father had—restrictive in little matters and lenient in important ones.

It had been because of anxiety and confusion in discipline that David had robbed the corner dairy store. And now in the hospital David reacted violently to the restriction because he was confused again. He was unsure about how the staff felt toward him.

The next evening, when he started cursing, the nurse was able to talk to him about it instead of punishing him. The next morning David was reported to have slept well.

2 Methodist Churches Mark 90-Year Service

Two Methodist churches in Atlanta celebrated anniversaries Sunday. It was Druid Hills Methodist Church's 50th anniversary, and Glenn Memorial's 40th.

At Druid Hills, Dr. John B. Peters, pastor from 1932 to 1939, spoke on "History in the Christian Church" at the 11 a.m. service.

"God has acted in history in various ways," he said. "He acted in his leadership of the Jewish nation out of which came Jesus Christ. The church is the body of Christ today. The high purpose of the church is to create new men and new women."

Dr. E. C. Few, pastor from 1939 to 1944 and now superintendent of the Gastonia (N.C.) district of the Methodist Church, led the morning prayer.

WIDOW READ LESSON

Mrs. E. G. Mackay, widow of the church's first pastor, who died several years ago, read the scripture lesson.

Dr. Nat G. Long, present pastor, introduced Dr. Candler Guy, grandson of Judge John S. Candler, brother of the late Bishop

Warren Candler and first chairman of the official board; Dr. Stewart Roberts Jr., son of the late Dr. Stewart Roberts, first superintendent of the Sunday School; Mrs. J. H. Gilmore, daughter of the late W. S. Featherstone, from 1900 to 1907 superintendent of the Copenhill Mission Sunday School, forerunner of the present church; Miss Elizabeth Cheshire, in 1908 first president of the Women's Missionary Society, and Miss Louise Braselton, in 1940 first Wesleyan Service Guild president.

Dr. Few and Dr. Rembert Sisson, former pastor and now district superintendent of the Atlanta-East District, presided at the evening service.

At Glenn Memorial, Dr. John W. Rustin of Kingsport, Tenn., stressed the importance of history in understanding the present and judging the future.

ENTERED EMORY

Dr. Rustin, pastor of Broad Street Methodist Church in Kingsport, entered Emory University from Emory-at-Oxford 41 years ago.

"The professors, through their lives on the campus, open windows for students," Dr. Rustin told the congregation of Glenn, which is situated on the Emory campus. "This enables the student to dream dreams and later to fashion these dreams into reality."

One must remember that the past was somebody's present and somebody's future, he said.

"It was at the expense of blood and privations that this great nation, this great church and this great university were established," he said.

In the afternoon, the parsonage was open for guests. The pastor is the Rev. Eugene T. Drinkard. Monday at 7:30 p.m., Dr. Rustin will address a birthday dinner in the Emory cafeteria.

Widow Seized, Robbed by Son At Knife-Point

NEW YORK (UPI)—A Barmaid was robbed of $128 at knifepoint by her own son Sunday.

Police said Mrs. Catherine Cornell, a widow, was getting ready to open her bar for business when her son John, 24, suddenly seized her.

She said that John, who recently was treated at Bellevue Hospital for alcoholism, sipped a few beers and then grabbed a foot-long butcher knife.

"He just told me to get behind the bar and give him the money," she said. "He had the knife in my back and told me to get the money."

Boy, 15, Quizzed In Youth's Death

TOCCOA—A 15-year-old boy was questioned Sunday in the shotgun death of another youth, Sheriff Wilmer Shirley said.

The sheriff said the body of Harold Addison, 16, was found Saturday night in a wooded area near his home in the Eastanolee Community in Stephens County. The sheriff said Addison was found lying on his back. He had been shot in the stomach with a shotgun, apparently at close range, Sheriff Shirley said.

The shotgun was not found immediately.

The sheriff declined to give further details of the shooting.

But he said he and other officers had picked up a 15-year-old acquaintance of the young victim.

He said officers spent much of Sunday questioning the youth. "I can't tell you anything right now," Sheriff Shirley said Sunday night, "but I believe we're finally getting down to the bottom of this."

U.S. Urged To Protest Red Tests

WASHINGTON (AP)—A strong U.S. protest and possible United Nations action to halt Soviet missile tests in the Central Pacific were urged Sunday by Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.).

Mansfield, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, telegraphed Secretary of State Christian A. Herter requesting an immediate, strong protest from the department against what the senator called high-handed and dangerous plans of the Russians to fire missiles into the international waters of the Central Pacific.

By attempting to set aside 27,000 square miles for missile tests, Mansfield said the Russians are arbitrarily taking over an area which should remain open to navigation and fishing. He said the countries most directly affected are Australia, Japan and the United States.

"I am requesting the State Department to make a strong protest immediately and if that is not successful to seek a special session of the United Nations to consider and deal with this high-handed performance," Mansfield said.

If the Russians do not how to protests, Mansfield said President Eisenhower should reconsider his decision to attend a mid-May summit conference in Paris.

"If this is what the Soviets mean by the 'spirit of Camp David' then I think serious reconsideration should be given to our agreement to attend a summit meeting," Mansfield said.

After the ballet Danilova will be honored at a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barnett.

Soviets Likely to Launch Rockets Near Caspian

WASHINGTON (AP)—A high U.S. military authority said Sunday the Soviet rockets to be fired into the central Pacific Ocean probably will be blasted from a launching pad in the vicinity of the Caspian Sea.

Hitherto it had been assumed the firings would be from launching sites somewhere in Siberia.

Authoritative sources said Soviet launchings from a missile pad near the Caspian would utilize the great-circle course and involve a distance of about 6,000 miles.

The Caspian Sea is on the Soviet Union's southernmost frontier with Iran in the Middle East. Soviet missile activities have been carried out in this area, it is known here.

Grandmother, Girl, 13, Found Slain in Home

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—A woman and her 13-year-old granddaughter were found shot to death in their home here Sunday night.

They were identified as Sally Martindale, 13, and her grandmother, Maggie Callahan, 64. Police said Sally apparently was shot while sitting on a bed studying. Her body was found on the floor in a bedroom. There was a math book nearby.

The grandmother's body was found in a hall outside the bedroom. Police said five empty cartridges fired from a .32 caliber pistol were found in the bedroom.

Officers said a search was started in a semi-rural area near the home for Tom Callahan, 64-year-old cousin of Maggie Callahan, an unemployed textile worker.

Mother Accused in Beating of Daughter

BERKELEY, Calif. — Mrs. Ilona Sasse, left, 37, is shown Sunday when she was jailed for a day and released on $1,050 bail, for investigation of a dog-leash beating of her daughter, Ursula, right, 17. "She has driven me to desperation," declared the mother.

An American bombing raid on Breslau in eastern Germany in 1945 separated Mrs. Sasse from Ursula, then 3, and another daughter, Renata, then 4. They were reunited in 1957. (Associated Press Photo).

Peiping Could Orbit a Satellite By '62, U.S. Intelligence Shows

WASHINGTON—A secret intelligence estimate now circulating within the government predicts that Communist China could launch an earth satellite within the next two years.

The estimate is based on increasing indications, obtained partly from intelligence sources, that Red China is intent on becoming a dark horse entry in the space race and has an active program under way to achieve this objective.

There is information, for example, indicating that a satellite launching site is under construction in the northwest part of Red China.

There are also indications, according to informed sources, that the Soviet Union is providing technical assistance for the Chinese space effort and may even be providing the rockets for launching satellites.

The intelligence estimate has served to emphasize the concern of many scientists and officials that the United States, in its preoccupation with the space challenge presented by the Soviet Union, is overlooking Red China and other nations.

Among these scientists and officials there is fear that if Red China should succeed in launching a satellite, the psychological impact upon the world opinion could be every bit as devastating as the Soviet achievement in launching the first earth satellite more than two years ago.

Following the propaganda example of the Soviet Union, Red China could be expected to point to its satellite as symbolic proof of the technological prowess developed under the Communist system. Among Asiatic nations, Red China could then pose as the technological equal of the Western powers.

GOP Raps Hastiness On Rights

By ANTHONY LEWIS (Copyright 1960, The New York Times Co.) WASHINGTON — A House Republican leader said Sunday that he saw no need for extraordinary tactics to get a civil rights bill to the floor of the House.

Rep. John W. Byrnes of Wisconsin, chairman of the House Republican policy committee, said he was "confident that there will be civil rights legislation this session." He argued that there was no reason to rush into special tactics.

Last week the Democratic leaders virtually invited members to take an unusual step to bypass the rules committee, where a civil rights measure is now stalled. The device was a discharge petition.

'WHY GET EXCITED?'

Some Republican signatures would be necessary to reach the required total of 219 names on the petition. Democrats have said that there are few Republicans among the approximately 140 signers so far.

Byrnes said that he had never signed a discharge petition because he did not believe in side-stepping House rules. He added that he had no intention of signing this one.

"I don't see why we have to get this excited in the first week of the session anyway," he said. "Why start right off by trying to bypass the rules committee? Why not give them a chance to meet once or twice and see what happens?"

SURE OF BILL

"One or two or three weeks at this stage of the game won't make any difference in any case. I'm sure the bill will come out in good time."

The Senate is expected to take up the civil rights issue in mid-February. Some strategists there hope the House will have passed a bill by then, so that it can be routed directly to the Senate floor without committee consideration. That technique was used successfully in 1957.

The chairman of the Rules Committee, Rep. Howard W. Smith, (D-Va.), is an implacable and skillful opponent of all civil rights measures. But there is some belief that, if the discharge petition gains success, he may let a bill out "voluntarily" rather than let the petition prevail.

Father Beats Baby to Death To Halt Crying

RICHMOND, Va., (UPI). George R. Fleharty, 20, beat his two-month-old son to death Sunday to stop him from crying.

Fleharty and his wife, who first told police the infant fell down a flight of 10 steps, admitted under questioning that the father repeatedly struck the child with his fists. He was jailed on a murder charge.

The infant, Larry, cried persistently about 4 a.m., the couple said, and Fleharty struck him on the side of the face repeatedly. They said Larry then appeared to go to sleep.

They hurried him to a hospital when they were unable to awaken him later in the morning.

4. Party propaganda has a "narrow sphere of influence." "It does not embrace the masses. And is not always presented in accessible or simple forms."

The central committee outlined the major objectives of the new indoctrination program. It also prescribed specific objectives for the indoctrination of different segments of the population and directives for all propaganda media.

The "leading postulate of all ideological work" must be the "absolute realization" of the constitutional principle that "he who does not work does not eat," the party said. All energies must be directed against persons who refuse "socially useful" labor, it decreed.

The party said Soviet working people must be educated to an "unshakable belief in the cause of the party and people." It asked for an "active offensive" against bourgeois, that is Western, ideology and its "hostile" preachers, rightwing socialists and Communist "revisionists."

And the party ordered an "irrevocable struggle" against continuing manifestations of political attitudes, nationalism and "remnants of the past" like contempt for labor and social duties, bureaucracy, graft and speculation, favor-seeking, drunkenness, hooliganism and other "alien phenomena."

Of special importance, said the party, was propaganda that stresses the "peace-loving foreign policy of the Soviet Union."

The towerman on duty at the spot, Edward Reish, 27, Wellington, was standing alongside the track ready to hand up an order on a stick to the engineer of No. 312. Reish said he saw the train was coming too fast and turned to run.

"I took off running and something hit me on the leg and knocked me down, and I just laid there," he said.

Two sections of the diesel unit were overturned and the third section ran up onto these two, Katz reported. He said that one of the cars had turned sideways on the track and was hit broadside by another that was running behind it.

Police said she was sitting in the car, which was parked in a carport, and the brakes apparently gave way. The car rolled down the driveway and hit a retaining wall, crushing her as she was attempting to get out of the car.

The Man for the Job

At the Gator Bowl banquet after Arkansas beat Georgia Tech, Ray Graves was sitting at a corner table in the George Washington ball room. The man had seldom been as dejected over a defeat, and he smiled for the first time when someone inquired if he was going to be the next head coach at Florida.

"I'd sure like to have the job," he said, "but there's nothing definite right now. If Dave Nelson of Delaware doesn't go there, I think I'll have a 50-50 chance."

Outlar

Graves officially became the new Gator boss Saturday when he signed a five-year contract. Only time will tell how Graves will fare as a head coach, but this corner believes he'll be a tremendous success.

He's a shrewd man with a knack for organization and, of course, he has few peers as a defensive genius. During his 13-year term as Bobby Dodd's aide at Georgia Tech, Engineer opponents averaged only one touchdown per game.

It's ironic that Florida selected Graves, for Bob Woodruff was also a defensive specialist. That was the major squawk from disgruntled Florida fans. They wanted Woodruff to go for broke, but he stuck to the fundamentals of Tennessee football. Graves also learned his football from Bob Neyland and, like Woodruff, he is jumping from the Tech staff into a head coaching slot.

Though emphasis may be on defense, Graves will also shoot the works on offense. Florida faithful will be presented a wide-open game. That was one of the first questions asked after Graves signed, and he promptly announced that the Gators would take a stand for offense. Graves hasn't announced his backfield professor, but he'll be a pass-minded coach.

—Opportunities and Challenges at Florida
Bob Bossons, former Tech star and assistant now at Minnesota and a fine head coach prospect himself, may join Graves in Gatorland. And it won't be too surprising if Lew Woodruff accompanies Ray from Tech to Florida. These moves, of course, have been rumored as has Bob Woodruff's return to Tech.

Graves' shift to Florida also alters the future coaching picture at Tech. It was no secret that Graves was destined to step into Dodd's shoes when he retired as head coach. Now, of course, Graves no longer figures in the set up at the Flats. Many things can happen and Dodd has no intention of relinquishing the reins at present, but you'll be hearing Frank Broyles mentioned prominently from now on.

Graves is the third member of Dodd's staff to graduate as a head coach at a major college. Woodruff became the first when he went to Baylor, then Broyles debuted at Missouri and now Graves. The Florida job, as Woodruff no doubt has reminded his old friend, is indeed a challenge. Gator alumni, still seeking their first SEC championship, have challenged every coach who opened shop in Gainesville. Despite Woodruff's 10-year term, the average life of a Florida head coach is less than four years. With a five-year contract in his pocket, Graves is over par from the kickoff.

There are problems at Florida, there are also many assets. Unlike most institutions, money isn't scarce in Gatorland. In addition to routine revenue, there's the racetrack fund to fatten the athletic purse. With a rich treasure chest, however, Gator boosters won't accept defeat. In Woodruff's case, they wouldn't even accept victory.

—A Hollywood Script: Tech vs. Gators
Graves naturally is aware that nothing shy of a championship team will satisfy the hungry Gators. And this department thinks he'll collect an SEC crown during his five-year term. Few coaches know more football: few coaches work harder. If Florida alumni unite and support their new coach, there should be a lot of sunny, successful Saturday afternoons in Gainesville.

When the Gators take on Tech next fall the script will be right out of Hollywood. After seeing Graves and Dodd on the same bench so long, it will seem strange to watch the men matching touchdowns. During his freshman campaign, Bobby Dodd Jr. indicated that he'll be a varsity quarterback for the Gators. When young Dodd enrolled at Florida, he never dreamed that he'd be playing for the coach who saw him grow up on the Tech campus. Tickets for Tech and Florida will be at a premium.

Replacing Graves poses quite a problem for Dodd. Woodruff would fit right into the set-up, but not many aides can handle the job like Graves. If Woodruff doesn't come to Tech, Dodd and Graves may be competing right off the bat. Both hold Bossons in high esteem, and they may be dueling for his services.

Like virtually everyone in Atlanta in general and Tech in particular, I regret to see Graves leave the Flats. We came to the city the same year, and it has indeed been a pleasure to work with him on the sports beat. He's never too busy to answer a question, and he battled 1,000 with the local press.

I want to wish Graves and his charming wife, Opal, all the success in the world at Florida. In fact, I hope he loses only two games every year—to Georgia and Tech.

Bulldogs Seek Redemption Against Jackets Wednesday
By JACK WILLIAMS
That national ranking Georgia Tech is waving affects the University of Georgia basketball team the same way a red cape affects a bull. So look for fireworks when Red Lawson's men invade Alexander Memorial Coliseum Wednesday night.

RED LAWSON
Not Afraid of Tech

"We're coming down there to redeem ourselves," Lawson promised Sunday night. "We have no fear of Tech, and anticipate a good game. I think Coach (Whack) Hyder thinks it'll be a good game, too."

If Lawson sounded a bit overly-optimistic Sunday, maybe he had a good reason. For on Saturday night at Columbus, his Bulldogs flattened Alabama, 70-58, in one of the team's best showings to date.

"For once in our life," Lawson said, "we found somebody we had outmaneuvered. Alabama didn't have the height to play us. Still, I thought we played a pretty sharp game."

And so now the Bulldogs turn their full attention to Tech. The game here Wednesday will be their only action of the week.

SEC PLAYER OF WEEK

Wells Rates Greenie Ardon Ahead of Pettit as a Soph

By MICKEY LOGUE

The next super star of Southeastern Conference basketball may be a fellow who had never even seen a basketball until he was 11 years old.

That was in 1951, when Jack Ardon's family migrated as misplaced persons from the "Old Country" to the United States.

The native Estonians settled in Lakewood, N.J., where young Jack was to grow into an athlete and scholar of high standing.

And grow he did. Ardon now stands 6 feet, 8½ inches tall barefooted. His 196 pounds make him slender for his height, but they also make him quick, a vital asset in winning basketball.

Though a rookie to the rugged "Dixie Dozen," Ardon scored 26 points against Florida and 20 against Tennessee as his surprising Tulane team took undisputed grip on first place entering Monday's showdown at Kentucky.

Jack Ardon

ing Monday's showdown at Kentucky.

Coach Cliff Wells, a little fellow given to calling a spade a spade, Sunday was asked to evaluate Ardon, The Constitution's SEC Player of the Week.

"He is along the lines of Bob Pettit, a very fine young man whom I got to know quite well while he was at LSU," Wells began.

"Jack is the most coachable boy in the world. Any time you give him instructions, his reply is invariably, 'Yes, sir, coach.' He goes to Sunday school and church regularly, and is a very fine student."

How does he compare with all-America and all-Pro Pettit as a player?

"Only time can tell how Jack will approach Pettit as a player," Wells responded. "But I think he is better as a sophomore than Pettit was."

"You must remember, of course," he continued, "that Bob didn't come into his own until his junior year. Pettit's play took a tremendous jump after his sophomore season. It remains to be seen how close Ardon comes to matching him."

Nevertheless, the boy is coming along real well. Each game he profits by the experience of the game before. His big value to us is as a scorer.

"Jack is a good shooter from inside and outside. He hit a couple of 25-footers that made the difference in the final minutes against Tennessee."

"He and Vic Klinker, our captain, complement each other. If opponents fall off one, the other takes up the slack. Klinker is 6-6 and between them they've been getting most of our rebounds. They picked off 40 against Florida."

Where does Ardon need to show most improvement?

"Defense," Wells countered. "Doesn't everybody? But he's improving there too. He played the middle man on our 2-3 zone and blocked six or eight shots against Tennessee."

Wells confessed to being surprised at Tulane's leading the SEC.

"We have a lot of inexperience," he said, "and if we break even, I think we'll have done a good job. At one time against Tennessee, we had four sophomores and a senior in the game."

Kentucky?

"They have some good boys back from last year, and we know they'll be tough. But we'll be giving it our best try."

Ardon carries a 17-point average, fifth largest in the league, into Lexington. And he's an A and B man in the classroom.

"It's marvelous the way he took to the American game," Wells said. "He's just 20 now, and I think he has a long way to go yet."

Jack plans to teach social studies when he gets out," Wells said. "I've already had inquiries from three Eastern prep schools who would like to have him on their staffs when he is available."

First, though, Wells hopes Ardon can become the next Pettit or Bailey Howell.

Kaiser and Waters Duel at Big Dome

SEC Leaders Clash Tonight

By MICKEY LOGUE

Georgia Tech's Roger Kaiser and Mississippi's Jack Waters shoot it out for the Southeastern Conference scoring lead here Monday night in a basketball game Tech is heavily favored to win.

Waters currently is the league's top gun, totting a 22.6 average into the 8 o'clock tipoff at Alexander Memorial Coliseum.

After outpointing Mississippi State's Jerry Graves, 21-12, Saturday night, Kaiser stands a notch behind Waters with a 21.5 reading.

Since league-leading Tulane (3-0) tackles Kentucky (2-1) in Lexington at the same time, the second-place Yellow Jackets (2-0) have a good chance to buzz ahead in the SEC race.

However, Coach Whack Hyder is not counting his victories until they are safely tucked away on the scoreboard.

"Ole Miss has a good ball club," he said Sunday. "Waters is a big, 6-4 boy who is mighty hard to stop when he jumps to shoot."

"He is not as good a percentage shooter as Kaiser, but he shoots more often and makes a lot of points."

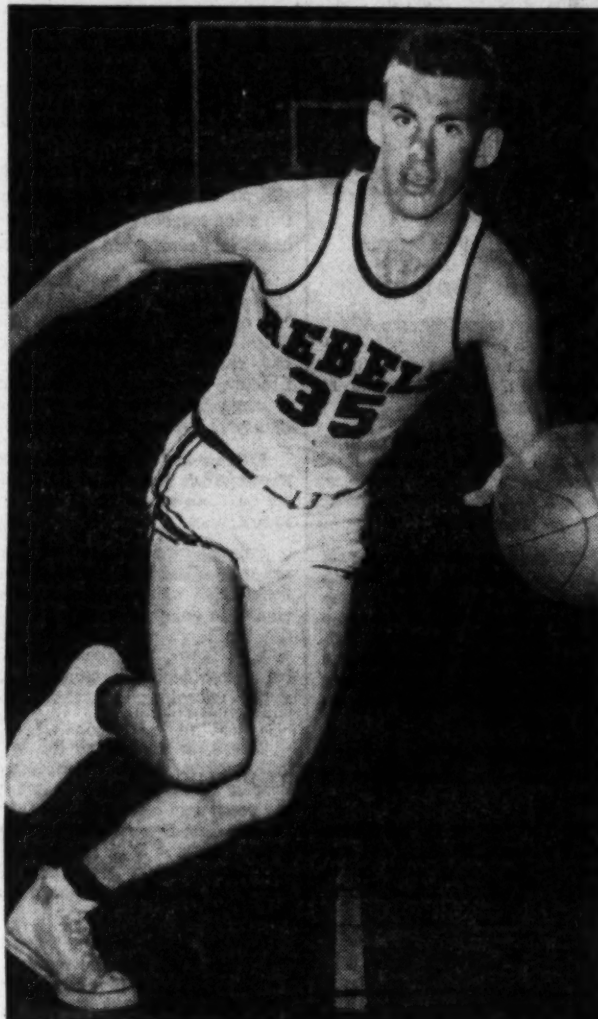

Hyder was undecided about who would be assigned to guard Waters.

"Two or three fellows will probably get a shot at him before the game ends," he explained. "Bobby Dews (5-11) or Wayne Richards (6-7) probably will start guarding him."

Dews may be chosen because of his speed and quickness or Richards because of his size.

They and Kaiser will join playmaker Dave Denton (6-3) and center Jim Riley (6-8) in Tech's usual starting lineup.

Bill Poteet (6-2), a swiftly rising junior, and John Hoffman (6-1) will be Tech's top replacements, with John Gher (5-10) and John Powell (6-6) slated for duty.

Waters, Sterling Ainsworth (6-6½), John King (6-2), Bill White (6-5) and Louis Griffin (6-7) are expected to open for Coach Country Graham's Rebels.

They share third spot in the SEC with a surprising 2-1 record, one victory coming by eight points over Auburn. Ole Miss is 9-2 overall, its lone conference

Graves Eyes Ellenson, LeBaron as Assistants

Bossons, Woodruff, Meyer, Rodgers Also on Florida List

By AL THOMY

It is 90 per cent certain that Gene Ellenson, Georgia tackle of the early 40s, will be named to the University of Florida varsity coaching staff, The Constitution learned Sunday.

Moving quickly to fill his coaching staff, new Gator coach Ray Graves Sunday asked and received permission from Georgia Tech coach Bobby Dodd to talk with a member of the Jacket staff.

Graves said he was "not at liberty to divulge the name of the coach," but The Constitution learned it was Lewis Woodruff, defensive backfield teacher and a close personal friend of Graves. Woodruff is expected to receive an invitation to join the Florida staff.

At the same time, two new names were added to the roster of Florida candidates, quarterback Eddie LeBaron of the Washington Redskins and backfield aide Ken Meyer of Wake Forest.

Graves would neither confirm nor deny speculation that they would be interviewed for the post of offensive backfield coaches.

LeBaron and Meyer join Air Force assistant Pepper Rodgers, a one-time Tech backfield ace, and Rice aide Bo Hagan, ex-Jacket coach, among the candidates.

Presence of LeBaron on the list lends credence to Graves' statement that he would stress offense as well as defense at Florida. It, in fact, points to signs of a prototype attack for Gators of the future.

Another who will talk with Graves next week is Bob Bossons, Continued on Page 13

Lee Shows Great Quarterback Does Make a Big Difference

Steve Owen Sums It Up

By JESSE OUTLAR
Constitution Sports Editor

MOBILE—Stout Steve Owen, winning coach in the first Senior Bowl, summed up the 11th annual affair: "A great quarterback does make a difference and often makes a coach great."

Jack Lee of Cincinnati was the great quarterback Saturday at Ladd Stadium, and the difference was 19 points—the most lopsided licking in the series.

Jim Lee Howell of the New York Giants has been a great coach for a long time, but he'd probably have been sitting on the losing bench if Lee had been wearing a South uniform.

Charley Britt of Georgia pitched well enough to win most games and the South's outstanding player award. But there's never been a passing exhibition in the Senior Bowl like Lee staged.

Before Lee bombed the South, 26-7, before a record crowd of 40,119 fans, Auburn's Travis Tidwell's name was at the top of the Senior Bowl book. Tidwell hurled Owen's South team to a 22-12 victory in the inaugural game, hitting 13 of 19 passes for 227 yards.

The accuracy mark still stands, but Lee and Britt tied the completion record by clicking on 13 of 21 heaves. Lee rolled up a new yardage statistic with a staggering total of 283 aerial yards. Britt's receivers netted 124.

DEACS, UTAH BITE DUST
FOUR OF NATION'S LEADING TEAMS HEAD FOR TROUBLE

NEW YORK (AP)—The nation's top ranked clubs, still puffing after a tough weekend, figure to find the going tougher still as major college basketball heads into what could be a week of upsets.

Things were bad enough Saturday. All-America Oscar Robertson scored just 24 points, his season low, although Cincinnati's No. 1 Bearcats whipped Tulsa, 83-50, for their 13th straight victory and a 12-0 season record. California, West Virginia, Bradley, Ohio State and Southern California had to come from behind for victories—with all but California needing the final minute to make it.

Fifth-ranked Utah and eighth-ranked Wake Forest didn't make it at all. Utah was upset, 73-61, by Utah State. North Carolina spilled Wake Forest, 62-59.

Only sixth-ranked Georgia Tech, an 82-60 winner over Mississippi State, and ninth-ranked Illinois, which whipped Minnesota 90-82, joined Cincinnati in enjoying anything like a breeze among the top 10 in the Associated Press poll. Texas A & M (10-0), Villanova (9-0) and LaSalle (8-0) kept pace with Cincinnati as the last of the major unbeaten, but the Aggies and LaSalle had to hustle to do it.

Things get real rough this week, with Cincinnati meeting St. Louis Wednesday and playing at Bradley Saturday. Illinois has to play Purdue (on the road) and Michigan State, both unbeaten, in the Big Ten Conference, Monday night and Saturday. Texas A & M runs into Southern Methodist Tuesday night and Texas Saturday in the Southwest race. And Villanova is at West Virginia Saturday.

Cincinnati, out-shooting Tulsa 2-1 (35-17), again was without 6-4 Bob Wiesenhahn, and he'll probably be out because of injury against St. Louis and Bradley in Missouri Valley Conference showdowns. Bradley, No. 4 in the poll with only an 86-71 defeat at Cincinnati in 11 games, is the Mo-Valley runner-up with St. Louis (10-3) third.

Bradley's Braves used a full-court press and came from 19 points back before winning 71-70 at Wichita on Dan Smith's jump shot with 36 seconds left. St. Louis (No. 12) whipped North Texas 75-65.

California (12-1), ranked No. 2, trailed by one at the half at Stanford, but nailed the Indians, 52-43. Tenth-ranked Southern Cal (10-4), the team that beat California once in three tries, against the NCAA champs, stayed tied with the Bears for the Big Five lead with a 69-68 decision at Washington on Jim Hanna's final-second jump shot.

Third-ranked West Virginia (12-1) won, 75-73, at Penn State after trailing by three with 90 seconds remaining. Lee Patrone's layup off a steal counted the clincher after All-America Jerry West, who led with 26 points and 13 rebounds, had broken a 71-71 tie with a pair of foul shots.

Ohio State, out-shot from the field (40-35), beat Indiana's Hoosiers, 96-95, on Larry Siegfried's lone field goal—a shot that rolled the rim and then plunked in with 5 seconds left. Big Jerry Lucas scored just 20 points, but tipped in the basket that brought the Bucks, who had trailed by seven, within one point at 95-94.

The seventh-ranked Buckeyes (9-2) now are 2-0 in the Big Ten along with Michigan State and Purdue, while the favored Hoosiers are 0-3 and all but out of it. Michigan State defeated Michigan, 89-58, and Purdue walloped Wisconsin, 90-69.

North Carolina (7-3), ranked No. 19, almost blew an 8-point edge over Wake Forest (8-3) before Lee Shaffer's three-pointer put it away with 29 seconds left. Duke stayed a half-game ahead of North Carolina in the Atlantic Coast by out-scoring North Carolina State, 12-0, in the last 4½ minutes for a 47-34 victory.

Georgia Tech (10-1) beat Mississippi State's defending Southeastern champs behind Roger Kaiser's 21-point job. Tulane, the only other unbeaten in SEC play, rallied for a 61-56 decision over Tennessee. Kentucky walloped Louisiana State, 77-45, and Auburn beat Florida, 73-69.

BPA FINALS AHEAD?

Pace's 1442 Nears a Goal

By PAUL ATKINSON

Bill Pace, the nation's best six-game bowler, had a goal back in December.

"Boy, what wouldn't I give to get into those finals in the BPA Match Game Tournament," he told a visitor.

His record Saturday pace of 1,442, a bristling 240.3 pins per game average, put him near that goal. And Sunday he flashed back with a steady, if not so spectacular 1,226, for a 24-game report of 4,999 pins, or a 208 average.

That didn't list him in the tournament's top 10—he slipped to 11th behind an Atlanta favorite, Bill Lillard of the St. Louis Buds. Another Bud, Ray Smith, was first off a reading of 5,272.

But the Pacer made the cut-off of 96 easily. He and his kiegling colleagues will roll 12 games Monday in the slick new bowling lanes at Omaha, Neb., with the top 16 going into the semifinals in head-to-head competition. Finals of the tournament will be televised Friday night at 10 over WSB-TV (Ch. 2).

It was appropriate, in an ironic way, that Pace should bowl his high series with a heavily-taped back and against doctor's orders. He's been bowling against adversity all his life.

When he was five, doctors feared that he would lose his right leg. A bone crippling disease cast this fear into the Pace household in Alton, Ill.

But Pace recovered, though he still bowls with a limp.

And Lady Luck deserted him in the American Bowling Congress tournament at St. Louis, Mo., last June. He had rolled a 743 singles that appeared a cinch to stand. But along came Ed Lubanski the next day to post a 764, and Pace had only a day of glory at the top of the heap. He eventually settled for third place in the ABC singles.

That short 24-hour span, however, ranked as Pace's most thrilling moment. At least, it did before Saturday's 1,442.

Bowling's in the Pace family.

He was one of 12 sons and daughters of the Alton, Ill., Paces. His father once headed a team composed of Paces.

Is the Bill Pace family growing into bowling? "It sure is," said Bill before he left Atlanta for the tournament. "My wife, Joanne, bowls about a 150 average in a league here.

"My daughters? Well, they're only four and three years old. But we took the oldest, Janet, out to the lanes the other day and she bowled 34 in duckpins."

playoffs, had Units on his side Saturday, but he was registered on the roster as Lee.

Second guessing a coach who has produced two straight world championship teams is a hazardous venture, but the Monday morning quarterbacks were taking a mild shot at Ewbank Sunday.

Britt did fine on offense, but the South backs were inept on defense. Many observers thought that Lee wouldn't have set a record if Britt had been operating at safety for the South. He's perhaps the best safetyman in college football, far superior on defense to LSU's Warren Rabb.

Lee says he'll cast his lot with the Houston entry in the new American Football League, but the Chicago Cardinals will be in there pitching for his services. As Coach Harry Mehre suggested, Lee probably hurled himself right into court, for he won't be able to reject either offer.

Though Lee turned the game into a rout when he shot for three North touchdowns in nine minutes, the South was on even terms, at least on the scoreboard, until

Hawks Roll, 121-111; Pettit's
39 Leads; 4 Celtics Foul Out74 Penalties
Set Record

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Bob Pettit scored 39 points and six players fouled out as the St. Louis Hawks dropped the Boston Celtics, 121-111, in a nationally televised NBA game here Sunday afternoon.

It was St. Louis' first victory over the Eastern Division leaders in five meetings this season and the Celtics' fifth reverse in the last seven games since they tied a consecutive game winning streak of 17.

Four of the Celtics went out because of personals as 74 fouls were called by referees Arnie Heft and Earl Strong. This was a new Kiel Auditorium record. Thirty-nine fouls were called against the Hawks, 35 against the Celtics.

Pettit, playing one of his strongest games also hauled down 18 rebounds compared to 16 for Bill Russell. Pettit sank 15 of 31 field goal tries.

The Hawks' rebound edge was 78-67.

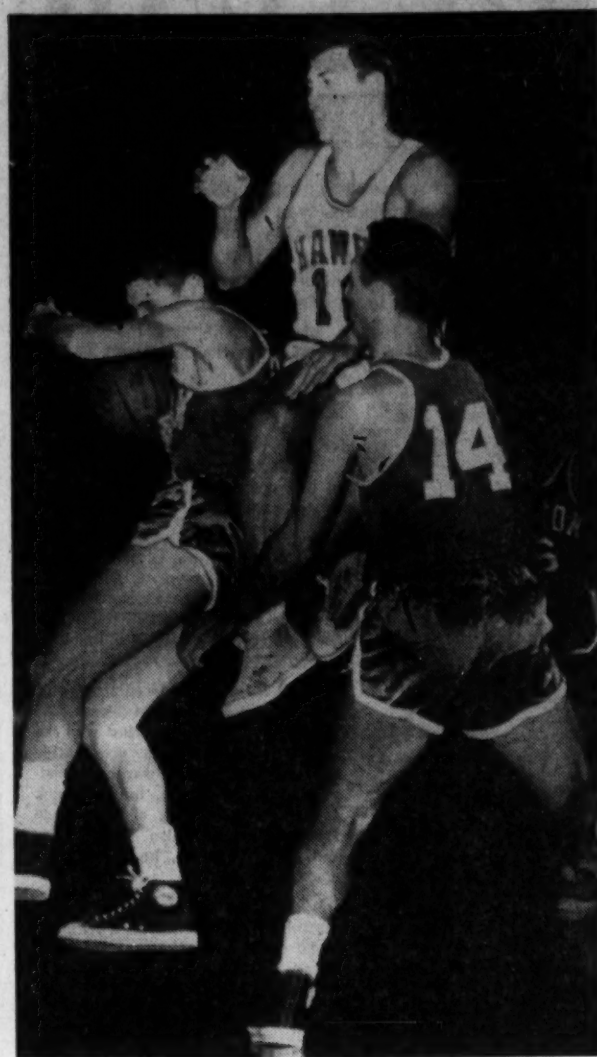

Other high scorers included Tom Heinsohn, one of the Celtics with six personals, and St. Louis' Clyde Lovellette, each with 29. Cliff Hagan tallied 21, giving the Hawks starting front line of Pettit, Lovellette and Hagan a total of 89.

Warriors Sink Knicks

NEW YORK (AP)—The Philadelphia Warriors went on an 8-point scoring spurge Sunday night and rolled to their eighth straight National Basketball Assn. victory—a 116-103 decision over the New York Knickerbockers.

The Knicks had overhauled the Warriors in a tremendous third period shooting performance that brought them from a 60-53 half-time deficit to a lead of 63-62 early in the third quarter.

This margin bounced back and forth 10 times before Andy Johnson's field goal put the Warriors in front, 78-76, late in the period.

The Philadelphia never trailed for a 112-106 National Basketball Assn. victory.

Wilt Chamberlain scored 35 points to lead the Warriors. Nineteen of these came in the last half. He got excellent support from Paul Arizin with 23 points and Johnson with 22.

Lakers Clip Royals

CINCINNATI (AP)—Minneapolis rallied to the lead Sunday after Cincinnati's scoring ace, Jack Twyman, fouled out in the fourth quarter and the Lakers hung on thereafter.

Larry Foust's 30 points produced the big margin in the Lakers' second victory over Cincinnati in two days under new Coach Jim Pollard.

Twyman put in 29 points helping the Royals rise from behind in the third quarter. Cincinnati had a 102-99 edge when he fouled out with 3:04 left in the game, but the Royals fell back steadily thereafter.

Job Talks

By Vera Atkins
Co-Owner of Atkins Personnel Service
A remark sometimes heard from employers when they are finding it difficult to interest an employee in their job is: "If we have another big depression like when I was young, applicants might appreciate a job more." Many present-day employers also blame absenteeism, attitude and quality of work on the lack of fear of loss of job. These employers think that the worker would perform differently if he or she thought that another job—just as good—would be hard to find.
I am not sure I agree. The traits of "courage or fear"—of "loyalty or deceit"—of "honor or treachery"—of the "willingness to do the work to the best of one's ability"—or "carelessness"—all these and many more—are within an individual—born of this time—or any time. Although the economic and environmental aspects may have something to do with how that person does his daily job, I believe that mostly he or she will do it in accordance with their natural character.
People have different capacities for responsibility, loyalty and talents. Workers respond according to their treatment and of inherent needs, it is true, but I believe that in most cases, fear and anxiety only makes them nervous and unsure. I doubt that it makes them do a better job.

HOWARD DRANE SINKS 125-YARD ACE

By JACK WILLIAMS

It was June in January Sunday for thousands of Atlanta golfers, and the happiest guy under the sun was 26-year-old Howard Drane.

Playing at North Fulton, Drane got his first hole-in-one on the 125-yard 11th hole. He used a wedge.

Drane usually shoots in the low 80s. In all the excitement over his ace, he doesn't remember what his score was Sunday.

There was excitement, too, at Bobby Jones where District Attorney Charles Read was busy trying out a new set of irons. The 8 iron proved lucky because Read used it to score an eagle two on the 364-yard sixth hole. It was the best shot of the day on the course.

Read was playing in a threesome with Taylor Wise and Willie Stewart.

Veterans said they can't recall a winter day when more Atlantans played golf. Pro Jim Yates expressed a typical reaction at Candler Park. "We've had 265 since 10 o'clock this morning," he said in late afternoon, "and some are still coming out. It's been a great day for golf."

Golfing interest this week turns to Sea Island where the lady pros open the LPGA season in the Sea Island Invitational Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The fun really starts on Thursday when Atlanta's Charlie Yates serves as master of ceremonies at a program, officially opening the new "Retreat Nine."

Yates, former British Open champion, started his golf career at Sea Island in 1931.

Following the program, he will join Atlanta's Louise Suggs and LPGA President Marilyn Smith for an exhibition match.

Ellenson in Line For Florida Post

former Tech B team coach who went on to Duke and then Minnesota, Bossons is a defensive line specialist.

Meanwhile, at Georgia Tech, Dodd said he would make no move to replace Graves "for a week or more." He said there was no hurry to fill the vacancy. At this time, Bob Woodruff, who preceded Graves at Florida, does not appear to be a candidate.

Quizzed on Ellenson, Graves admitted he has talked with the Florida native who coached the University of Miami line five years before resigning last year to go into real estate.

"Ellenson is a fine coach," said Graves. "I have worked with him in all-star games and clinics and I know just what he can do. He would fit right into our setup at Florida. I plan to have another talk with him about Tuesday."

In Miami, it was reported Ellenson said he was "90 per cent certain" he would take the job.

Ellenson, member of two Georgia bowl teams, presents coaching credentials of the highest order. In 1956 his Miami line led the nation in rushing and overall defense and in 1957 the Hurricanes were second in rushing defense.

His presence on the staff would give the Gators a valuable man in south Florida since Ellenson is a native of Miami.

Graves has already talked with Rodgers regarding the backfield post. They conferred last week during the NCAA convention in New York. Another conference is planned this week.

The LeBaron rumor crept in Sunday. It is no secret the little quarterback, who played in the All-Star game for Dodd after graduating from the College of the Pacific, is nearing the end of the professional line. He is working on a law degree but might be induced to coach if the right offer comes along.

The other new name, that of Meyer, adds more emphasis to Graves' decision to play the pro-type offense, for that's exactly what Wake Forest ran during the past season. The Deacons split both ends and threw the ball a mile.

Meyer, 34, played his football at Denison University (Ohio) under Woody Hayes. He has coached at Johnstown (Pa.) and East Palestine (Ohio) high schools. For the past two years he has served under Paul Amen, who resigned last week at Wake Forest.

Florida Board of Control Chairman J. J. Daniel, speaking from Jacksonville Sunday, said the hiring of assistants "is strictly up to Coach Graves."

He added: "We are mighty pleased and happy to have him. He has been very emphatic in his decision to play offensive as well as defensive football. And who should know offense better than a man who has had to defense all kinds of offense?"

rebounders." Hyder said, "And they will be tough on the boards. They are as good as Mississippi State and in some ways are better."

Tech lashed the Maroons, 82-60.

Hyder pointed out that Ole Miss is handicapped by the absence of second-best scorer and No. 1 rebounder—Ivan Richmann, who will miss the game because of serious illness in his family.

The 6-7 Richmann is averaging 15.1 points, and 12.3 rebounds.

Denton backs Kaiser with a 15.8 rate for Tech. Richards is next at 9.9.

After playing Ole Miss, Tech hosts Georgia in a non-conference game Wednesday and duels Vanderbilt in a "counter" here Saturday.

LA Open Halted By Heavy Rain; Resumes Today

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Heavy rains Sunday forced postponement of the third round of the $37,500 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

Officials of the Professional Golfers Assn. looked at the sloppy course and well-trampled greens this morning as first competitors arrived—and decided to call the round off until Monday.

The PGA said play will be resumed at 7:30 a.m. and will continue through Tuesday. The tourney was to have ended Monday.

Eric Monti, 41, enters the third round as the leader with a 36-hole total of 137. His rounds were 66 and 71.

Not Moving Fast Enough, Eaves Says

Auburn isn't moving fast enough on the basketball court to suit Joel Eaves.

After returning from Saturday night's hectic 73-69 victory over Florida at Gainesville, he sounded a little discouraged Sunday about his team's recent performances.

"Frankly," he said, "I don't think we've been playing too well. Maybe we're playing as well as we can and don't know it."

"But we certainly need to move better. We've been standing around too much. A little ball club has to keep moving to do any good against these bigger teams."

Eaves also presented the possibility that the Tigers are tired and trying to pace themselves.

"We've had six straight games away from home, and we play three more away before another home game. We're letting the boys off Monday."

"We had a kind of loosely played ball game with Florida. We had a little better of it the first half, and they did the second half. And it was just a question of who was going to win."

"(Porter) Gilbert and (Jimmy) Fibbe played good games. So did (Ray) Groover. (Henry) Hart

Campbell Takes Cage Titles

Fairburn Campbell's basketball forces, sweeping aside defending champions in both divisions in the finals, surged to twin championships in the Flint River Invitational basketball tournament Saturday night.

Coach Jack Hanson's Campbell boys thrashed M. L. Powell's Pike County quintet, 39-29, and the Fairburn lassies clipped Henry County, 36-33, breaking the losers'

10-game winning streak and handing them only their fifth loss in 58 games over a three-year span.

Playing in the finals for the third straight season, Campbell was led to victory by 5-8 Hulan Stanfield with 14 points. Frankie Phillips hit 11 for Pike.

Elaine Crawford fired 18 for the winners, Barbara Mahders 11 for the losers in the girls' title battle.

Sippin' whiskey in weathered barrels, old buildings in a quiet hollow...it's all remindful of Jack Daniel's day...

ONLY THE HORSES ARE GONE

Nothing much changes here—we make certain of that—for the method of making our whiskey was perfected almost a century ago. It's the old Tennessee process Jack Daniel employed in this very same spot. And we've faithfully kept on using it, unchanged from the past.

It's true we've acquired a number of trucks since most of our horses retired—but that gives us time to make a little more whiskey without rushing any part of Jack Daniel's old process. Even so, your dealer may still run out. If he does, won't you please ask for Jack Daniel's Whiskey again a little later?

L. P. Bondurant & Sons Offers Dishwasher for Small Businesses

More and more restaurants, hospitals, schools and institutions in this area are finding the Vulcan Autosan dishwashing and sanitizing equipment from L. P. Bondurant & Sons ideal for their needs.

There's a Vulcan Autosan to fit every kitchen. For example, Model CU-16B is especially suited to the small operation where space is limited and where "cutting corners" is essential. In this unique "package," available at Bondurant headquarters, 1351 Northside Dr., NW, the machine is set in a stainless steel table that also includes a pre-rinse sink and a handy scrap block.

A single tank, telescoping hood machine for 16x16 racks, the unit is designed for under the counter, back bar and fountain installations. It comes complete with pump, motor, control, thermometers and electric or steam tank heat, and will wash up to 800 dishes per hour. An effective wash and rinse spray system from above and below racks makes use of a welded tank having covered corners. All interior parts and parts above the table are of stainless, NiResist castings or of plated brass material.

A standard unit includes a 1/2-inch steam injector with hand-operated valve control or 1650-watt, 115- or 230-volt, electric immersion heater. Appealingly priced to fit into the budget of the small and medium-sized business operator, this popular unit is installed, engineered and serviced by L. P. Bondurant & Sons.

Whether the required washing capacity is 800 or 15,000 dishes per hour, there is a Vulcan Autosan dishwasher for every mass feeding operation. All types are available; door type rack, conveyor, flat belt and flight. Stainless steel construction, gas-fired heaters and steam boosters are available. All are approved by the National Sanitation Foundation and U. S. Laboratories.

Hollymatic patty molding machines continue to enjoy fast turnover at Bondurant & Sons. The Hollymatic is the only machine of its kind that automatically feeds Economical & Fast...

A demonstration of the unique Vulcan Autosan dishwasher shown above proves that it is compact, efficient and fast. The stainless steel table, pre-rinse sink and scrap block form a complete unit that will fit into the workroom—as well as the budget—of small and medium-sized business operations. Phone Bondurant & Sons at TR. 6-2689 for a demonstration. Accompanying story gives details.

the patty paper under each patty, eliminating costly and time-consuming manual paper feeding. Hollymatic feeds either large or small patty papers, allowing you to use the sheet size that sets off your patty to best advantage. Absolute portion control—an essential factor in cost control—is assured when you mold with this machine. Not only is the size and weight exactly the same each time, but the texture is just right, too.

L. P. Bondurant & Sons is today recognized as the oldest organization of its kind—from the standpoint of service—in this area. Their service and sales efforts are directed primarily to supermarkets, independent groceries, restaurants, meat processors, bakeries and institutional kitchens.

The firm is operated by L. P. Bondurant Sr., and his three sons, Louis Jr., Charles and Richard. With their wide and varied background of experience, they stand ready to assist and advise their many customers in this territory, and to help them obtain the most efficient service from their equipment.

For many years, the slogan of the Bondurant firm has been: "We Service What We Sell." To back up this statement, they carry the largest stock of repair parts in the South. They also carry a complete line of rebuilt and reconditioned kitchen machines. L. P. Bondurant, his three sons, and other members of the staff, are justifiably proud of their long and valued record of service. They cordially invite their customers, old and new, to call TR. 6-2689, or visit the firm at 1351 Northside Dr., NW, for service.

Firm Keeps Pace With City's Growth

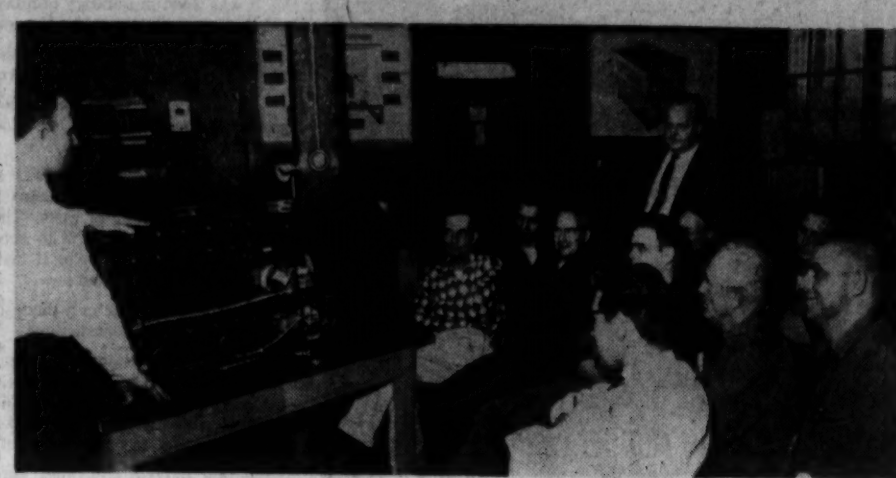

"During 1959 there were approximately 18,500 new dwelling units constructed within the Greater Atlanta area. The addition of such a large number of new residents has made it necessary for us to substantially expand our service operations to assure adequate comfort during the heating season," said Steve Carroll, service manager, Moncrief Furnace Company.

"To take care of this increased demand for service, Moncrief has enlarged their staff of mechanics and inaugurated an intensive program of technical training to speed-up service work through more accurate diagnosis of heating troubles.

Fortunately for many, Atlanta has escaped most of the bitter cold this winter. Any sudden drop in temperature or extended cold spell puts an extra burden on the heating system. At this time, the furnace has to work overtime to provide even normal room temperature. Under such circumstances, defective parts often give way or stop functioning and such a condition is almost certain to cause trouble," Mr. Carroll said.

"The present day war m air heating system requires little attention, however, there are some delicate parts that have to work efficiently if the system is to provide satisfactory heat."

Mr. Carroll went on to explain that the services which Moncrief recommends should be performed each year for the proper maintenance and care. They are: (1) Check and adjust the thermostat controls. (2) Check all safety feaowner," Mr. Carroll pointed out. "It seems that every day more and more Atlanta homeowners are becoming comfort-conscious. A large number have already modernized their heating system and there are many more in the planning stage.

"One of the new features that is particularly appealing at this time is the installation of Moncrief's new-type humidifier into a warm-air system. This improved unit is much larger than previous models and is today being widely recommended among medical circles, as a means to better health and comfort, during the heating season," Mr. Carroll concluded.

Moncrief Furnace Company with their local manufacturing plant is in a position to render any type of heating service. The service department is one of the largest in the South. It is staffed with skilled factory-trained mechanics available to Atlanta homeowners seven days per week, 24 hours per day. In addition to providing around-the-clock emergency service, Moncrief carries a large stock of equipment with replacement parts to fit most every known make of furnace. Homeowners who wish to take advantage of Moncrief's special mid-winter furnace cleaning offer or other service are invited to call TR. 6-3611.

Skilled Mechanics Prepare Your Car for Winter Driving

Start the New Year Right With A Ralph Cannon Auto Check-Up

For carefree driving in 1960, begin with a Ralph Cannon automobile check-up. An auto check-up can mean the difference between a minor repair job and the expense involved in a complete breakdown.

Ralph Cannon, the widely-known specialist in Buicks and other fine cars, has one of the largest independent service organizations in the city featuring Dynaflo repairs. He stresses that a smoothly functioning Dynaflo transmission in your Buick "means a smoother ride, better engine performance and greater gasoline economy."

Let Ralph Cannon check and... drive through the tricky... If you're planning a trip in the near future, your plans aren't complete until you get the Ralph Cannon Buick "winter check-up." Your car is checked inside and out to assure the utmost in driving pleasure and operation. Satisfaction is guaranteed on every job.

Mr. Cannon knows Buick automobiles as few in the South do. He has been working with Buicks for nearly 50 years; he knows intimately their every working part. When your car gets a Dynaflo adjustment, motor tuneup, safety overhaul or oil changeover from Ralph Cannon and his staff of expert mechanics, you may be assured that it will save you money as well as save your car.

Using his many years of experience as a guide, Mr. Cannon himself designed his modern auto repair and service plant. As a result, you will see how efficiently arranged it is... how roomy working space and necessary equipment fit right in with each other... how the different shops were laid out so that everything moves along without confusion.

Thus, the Buick owner who brings his car into Ralph Cannon Auto Service gets his needed work done at reasonable cost in the shortest possible time. "Every customer a friend" is the old standby motto at the Cannon establishment.

Ralph Cannon's handsome auto service home is conveniently located for car owners who work in downtown Atlanta. Just behind the Greyhound bus station, it's only a few minutes from Five Points. Motorists who work in town find this "close-in" location especially noteworthy.

Revolutionary 'All-Range Tenna' Improves Television Reception

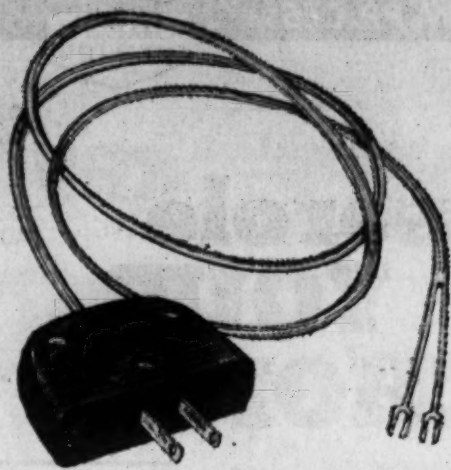

If your television picture is weak, wavy and washed out, and everybody in the family complains about missing those outstanding programs, the new "All-Range Tenna" may well be the answer to your troubles.

Manufactured by El-Tronics Specialties Co. of Hoboken, N.J., the "All-Range Tenna" is available to dealers at Paradies & Co. Interested parties other than dealers may purchase the unit at all Forrester 5 & 10 Stores, as well as at a number of other retail outlets. It ends the use of rabbit ears. It eliminates the need for a roof antenna.

It is shockproof, economical, and guaranteed safe by the manufacturer. As explained by officials of Paradies & Co., "Just plug the All-Range Tenna into any AC or DC electric socket. Instantly, you get marvelously clear television reception, as the unit literally turns all the electric wiring in your home into a huge powerful TV antenna. Yet—the All-Range Tenna never uses any current!"

The All-Range Tenna is used with all makes and models of television receivers—terrific for portables.

Says Jack Humphreys, advertising manager of the Paradies firm: "In discussing the sales possibilities of the All-Range Tenna with numerous TV set owners, we noted that many complained of having to use rabbit ears with their receivers, which often makes for an un-

Tour Europe In Your Own Foreign Car

With such highlights as the Oberammergau Passion Play, Olympic Games in Rome, International Horticultural Show in Rotterdam and the Eucharistic Congress in Munich dominating Europe's special events program in 1960, thousands of new American travelers will cross the Atlantic for exciting vacations.

According to the World Wide Travel Department of the Georgia Motor Club, which is affiliated with the American Automobile Assn., many of these people will see Europe in an automobile.

The AAA predicts that 250,000 Americans will spend at least part of their 1960 European vacation motoring. This is an increase of 50,000 over the 1959 estimate and is based on the fact that because European airlines and railroads will be crowded with American tourists coming to and from the big events, and hotel accommodations in the large cities will be at a premium, many U.S. citizens will take to the open road and visit the less frequented tourist regions.

During the past year, the association has issued over 93,000 international driving permits. This is a substantial increase over the 1958 figure which was approximately 84,000. AAA expects an even larger increase in the coming years because of the far-reaching effects of jet travel and the growing acceptance of the small and "compact" foreign cars by the American motoring public.

In 1959, foreign cars accounted for 8 per cent of all new cars bought by U.S. citizens. Because American vacationers have the opportunity to buy such a car for overseas delivery at factory prices, drive it in Europe, and return with it to this country, the volume on this type of travel accommodation will increase greatly within the next few years.

George Evey, Georgia Motor Club manager, points out that many people who have been in Europe within the past half dozen years, and are now planning to return, wish to see the more "out-of-the-way" areas, only accessible by car. More demands will be placed upon travel organizations to produce itineraries, which not only include the conventional popular touring areas, but also the picturesque outlying regions of the Old World which have been visited by comparatively few people.

For this reason, the Georgia Motor Club has expanded its European purchase and rental services for 1960. AAA is now offering 190 models of 26 makes of cars, including Alfa Romeo, Austin Healey, Borgward, Citroen, D.K.W., Fiat, English and German Ford, Jaguar, Lancia, Mercedes-Benz, M.G., Morris Minor, Opel, Peugeot, Porsche, Renault, Riley, Hillman, Sunbeam, Hummer, Singer, Saab, Simca, Triumph, Volkswagen and Volvo for delivery in Europe on an overseas purchase plan. Late model foreign cars may be ordered for rental in almost every major city in western Europe through the Georgia Motor Club.

For the past decade, the number of people who annually cross the Atlantic has steadily been on the rise. However, the increase in hotel facilities has not been commensurate with this increased tourism. To meet the demands of this travel boom, the European travel industry has turned to the motel as the answer to needed accommodations, because land outside the metropolitan areas is cheaper, and motels cost less to build. Also, more vacationers are turning toward the automobile as a means of European transportation because they have become more familiar, either by first-hand experience or through excellent guide books, with the roads and smaller cities of the Old World.

Documentation has become greatly simplified. The American International Driving Permit is now valid in all countries of western Europe, with the exception of western Germany, where a special German translation is needed. The necessity for the Carnet de Passages en Douanes or Triptique (customs passes for the car) has been eliminated in all European countries except England, Greece, Spain and Portugal. The former is used if the border of more than one country is crossed, and the latter is appropriate if only one of the above-mentioned nations is visited. All necessary documents may be obtained at the Georgia Motor Club offices at 1044 West Peachtree St., NW.

If you intend to motor in Europe in 1960, contact the travel counselors at the Georgia Motor Club Travel Department by calling TR. 5-7171 for full details on AAA's overseas car purchase or rental delivery program. AAA will also make arrangements to ship your own car to Europe if you wish to drive it on the Continent or British Isles.

'59 VOLUME ALMOST DOUBLE '58

Thoben Elrod Co. Achieves New Record in York Equipment Sales

Sales of York air conditioning, heating equipment and ice-making equipment in this area for 1959 were almost double sales for 1958 and over 3½ times 1957 sales volume, according to figures released today by John Strange, general manager of the York Dept. at Thoben Elrod Co.

"Public acceptance of our products has been very gratifying," Mr. Strange said, "and we are extremely proud of our efficient dealer organization whose efforts have made this soaring sales curve possible."

As Mr. Strange pointed out, the continuously increasing sales of York equipment in this area during the past several years is a good indication of the unusually high quality and efficiency of York products and of the excellent service available to purchasers.

The complete York line includes room air conditioners, furnaces, complete heating and cooling systems, with electronic air filtering; automatic ice machines, the new York heat pumps and similar equipment to fill almost any heating or cooling requirements.

"At the present time, we are receiving a great number of inquiries about our heat pump," Mr. Strange said. "It operates on the same principle as an automatic refrigerator that pumps heat from inside the box and discharges it inside the kitchen. The heat pump, however, will operate both ways and on a much larger scale. It pumps heat from the inside of your house and discharges it on the outside during the summer, then during the winter it reverses itself and pumps heat from outside the house, discharging it on the inside."

"The fact that the home-owner can heat his house in winter and cool it in summer with the same unit, using only electric power and outside air, seems almost unbelievable until one has seen it work," Mr. Strange added. "This can be seen in many of the new model homes, including one soon to be offered for sale near Roswell by Nelson Realty Co."

Popular York Products

As pointed out by John Strange, general manager of the York Department at Thoben Elrod Co., sales of York products in this area for 1959 were almost double sales for 1958. Looking over sales chart with him is, left, Ralph Bollinger, sales manager of the York department.

that are proving popular this time of the year are a new type gas furnace that conserves fuel, and the York Home Comfort Centers that provide heating, cooling, dehumidifying and electronic air filtering in one complete unit. "We are also selling a great deal of air conditioning equipment for installation in new homes and for use next spring," Mr. Strange said.

Dealer inquiries are always invited, he added. Also complete information on any type York heating, air conditioning or ice making equipment is always available to builders or the public through Thoben Elrod Co., 500 Amsterdam Ave., NE, TR. 3-1281.

PAPER FRILLED CROWN ROAST OF LAMB OR PORK IS REGAL
It's an Easy-to-Fix Dramatic Entree for Little Dinners or Grand Affairs

With a Little Help From Butcher, A Crown Roast Can Be Simple

By BARBARA SOMERVILLE
Constitution Food Editor

The most regal of all roasts is perhaps the Crown Roast, be it lamb or pork. Certainly it is one of the most spectacular meats a hostess can use to dramatize a buffet table.

Yet it is a roast that is little understood by most of us. We know of it, we have admired it when served by others—but if you're like me, I shied away from trying it for several years because I wasn't sure just what it was and cookbooks mostly tell you how to cook it—but not how to buy it!

Actually, there's nothing to it at all. You ask for two center-cut loins and then ask the meat retailer to fashion it into a crown. The rest is his responsibility—and he knows all the answers.

THE BUTCHER

But in case you're the curious type like I am this is what he'll do. First, he'll select two pork loins of approximately seven ribs each. Then he'll remove the backbone and cut away the meat around the ends of the rib bones. This is known as "frenching" and, after roasting, the rib bones can be decorated with paper frills as pictured—you'll have fun making these.

Finally, the retailer will take the two loins and shape them into a circle and secure the ends together with string.

THE HOMEMAKER

Now you take over—and it's really not a bit tricky. Season the meat with salt and pepper. Place the crown roast on a rack in an open roasting pan, rib ends down. Do not add water or cover. Roast in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for two hours.

This does not complete the roasting time needed. But for serving such a roast, usually a stuffing is used. I chose this Rice-Mushroom Stuffing, but you may prefer a Chestnut or Apple-Herb Stuffing.

Following the 2-hour cooking period, invert the roast so the rib ends are up. Place the Rice-Mushroom Stuffing in the center of the crown.

Next, it would be best to insert a roast meat thermometer in the roast, making sure the bulb is not resting on bone, in fat, or in the stuffing. This is the most accurate way to tell if the pork crown roast is done.

All fresh pork is cooked to the well-done stage . . . this means 185 degrees. If you're approximating cooking time, allow about 40 minutes per pound, total roasting time.

RICE-MUSHROOM STUFFING
2 tbsps. grated onion
2 tbsps. drippings
1 cup uncooked rice
3 cups water or soup stock

2 tps. salt
2 tps. poultry seasoning
1 can (4 oz.) button mushrooms drained
2 eggs, beaten

Brown onion in drippings. Add rice and stir until golden brown. Add stock and seasonings. Cover and cook slowly until rice is tender, about 40 minutes. Remove from heat; add drained mushrooms and beaten eggs. Mix lightly. Pile stuffing into center of crown. Continue roasting until meat thermometer registers 185 degrees.

Try it, won't you? It's so exciting to serve the first time—you'll feel like a seasoned cook and yet it is so simple a beginner can do it and do it well. If you're an experienced cook I doubt that you needed a reminder from me that a crown roast makes an easy-to-do spectacular meat feast.

NEW YORK — Watch for shapes that symbolize space and speed. You're going to be wearing them for spring fashion.

According to early rumblings circulating among the nation's fashion editors gathered for a week of showings by designers members of the New York Couture Group, Inc., the change for spring is no mere shift of a waistline, hemline, and shoulder width.

Miss Alexander

Designers are changing down to fashion fundamentals — concentrating on strictly contemporary forms, fabrics, and colorings; on where and when clothes are to be worn, and on how they must travel and adapt.

The formal shows begin this morning but, just from hints being dropped, already the imagination is envisioning the fashionable woman as a space creature. New puffy, capsule-shaped skirts, pouf and double-pouf hemlines, funnel sleeves, and bubble hats and hairdos are said to echo the oxygen-filled pressure suits designed for astronauts. The spiraling height of Frank Lloyd Wright's new Guggenheim Museum has designers working in spiral cuts and abstract silhouettes, folded and pleated into shapes.

DESIGNERS' AIM

The mark at which all designers are rumored to be aiming is the high-coiffed, long-waisted, and long-legged look. This coupled with the interurban, intercontinental and interplanetary fashion-thinking, may produce a spring wardrobe more versatile and more to the point of fitting the times than any.

Even sporty clothes are going to be designed with the knowledge that to more and more Americans all the world is a city or a street connecting cities. For this new citizen-of-the-world, sleek narrow jackets are longer this spring, pleated skirts are neat, tweeds are aligned with soft silk blouses. And still reflecting the town-or-country mood of casual fashion are decorative brass buttons and braid pipings, small-scale checks and polished, parchment wool surfaces.

Expected to be seen too will be a poised-for-flight feeling in flexible body-line flanked by wide, soft, wing-like sleeves. Some sleeves may be literally all armhole, beginning at the waistline circling out around the elbow. Others may be funnel-shaped. Still others may be dolman shaped with an arching seam underneath from waist to cuff. Rounded or tubular sleeves on coats and suits may be set in at a new straighter and wider shoulder line.

WAISTLINES DOWN

Waistlines are predicted to be definitely on a downward trend, with elongated bodices, hip yokes, inset midriff bands.

The two major suit looks are anticipated to be the angular, buttoned and braid-trimmed Chanel type and the loosely wrapped sort. Belted suits and collarless suits and coats are in the ascendant.

The favorite spring costume may turn out to be the coat dress with the full-length coat and dress of matching silk or silk and wool.

Gray is the color looming large as spring's basic. White will be for everything and everywhere. Pinks, blues, and yellow, bright and chalky, are comers. Greens and browns will look soft and muted. Violet may be the big surprise.

These are the predictions. Will they materialize? This is the week that will tell.

Linda Jean Bennett Is Wed to Mr. Terry

At an afternoon ceremony solemnized at the First Baptist Church of Tucker by the Rev. Homer J. Russell, Linda Jean Bennett, daughter of the John F. Bennetts of Tucker, was married to James B. Terry, son of the James R. Terrys of Tucker.

Mr. Bennett gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a princess gown of white satin appliqued in Alencon lace embroidered in seed pearls, and fashioned with a chapel train. Her veil was attached to a seed pearl crown and she carried a bouquet of white carnations, valley lilies, stephanotis and white orchids.

At the reception held in the church social hall, with Mr. and Mrs. Bennett as hosts, Jo Ann Knight kept the bride's book.

Mr. Terry and his bride left for a honeymoon on Jekyll Island. They will live in Chamblee.

Pigeons Poised For Legislature

Today the Georgia Legislature tunes up for what may be a real history-making session. And I gather from the mail that citizens over the state are almost as edgy over the prospect as the poor pigeons that nest in the cornices over the tall windows of the House and Senate chambers.

Old citizens, like old pigeons, are conditioned to the tumult which will be raised under the gold dome of the capitol. But young citizens and this year's crop of pigeons can't be sure what will be coming off and they are understandably jittery.

"I wish we didn't have to go through this," an old lawyer wrote of the Legislature. "The older I get the more I realize the truth of Montaigne's observation, 'It would be better for us to have no laws at all than to have them in so prodigious numbers as we have.' Let the General Assembly busy itself, I say, with repealing a few laws."

WISTFUL HOPE

This correspondent voiced the wistful hope that the Legislature would abolish capital punishment—a sentiment a surprising number of lawyers share.

A middle Georgia friend tucked a note in box of caramels, which she says are making "a real show" down in Macon. But even with her mind on flowers she thought of the Legislature.

"Happy days to you and the Legislature," she wrote. "I hope the newspapers won't hesitate to knock a few heads together over there. They need it."

At the beginning of the session I'm always so glad to see what Marvin Griffin called "the boys from the boondocks" coming back that I can't imagine anything from them but the most statesmanlike public service. They have come from all the interesting and individual and lovely sounding places in the state and I always feel that their motives are identical with those of wise and well-intentioned people everywhere.

PUFFED UP

This, of course, isn't necessarily so. There are fools and rogues and clowns in the Legislature, as everywhere, and now and then there'll appear on the floor of the House or the Senate a puffed-up character who will remind us all of Gilbert and Sullivan's Lord Chancellor. You remember he sang:

"The Law is the true embodiment Of everything that's excellent. It has no kind of fault or flaw, And I, my Lords, embody the Law."

But by and large the men who leave their businesses and professions to come and serve these 40 long days and far into many of the 40 nights, are intelligent and hard working and hope springs eternal that in the lot there'll be somebody of real greatness—maybe another Jefferson. It's part of the excitement of covering the Legislature, this realization that it's a testing and training ground for leaders. And anything can happen.

'60 Economy Looks Good, Marred by Ominous Signs

By JOHN G. FORREST
(Copyright 1960 by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK—Economic forecasts are made with an eye on the rearview mirror. Right now the road ahead is misty but it seems safe to guess that in 1960 the Gross National Product—the sum of all goods and services—will exceed a half trillion dollars for the first time.

Settlement of the steel strike would seem to assure that this figure will be surpassed, even though it makes it almost as certain that the dollars we count will be smaller than those of 1959.

At the same time, we must still wait to see if industries now riding the productive crest remain buoyant, while others attain expected gains.

And we must hope there is no serious slump in the stock market and consequent slackening of general employment.

Let's see what lies ahead while we keep watch on the road ahead.

First, Let's Look Back

Before looking ahead, however, it is sometimes advisable to glance back. Last year the Gross National Product rose to a record total of $478 billion. It should cross the half-trillion line in 1960 if there are no economic accidents.

And yet, only a generation ago, the U.S. government reported total national income of only $59 billion for the fiscal year 1935-36.

Twenty years ago no government agency and no economist foresaw that the total national income, as the Gross National Product was usually called then, would edge close to $500 billion in 1959.

And nobody can foresee with any degree of certainty what it will be in the future.

A generation ago 30 to 40 per cent of the average income was spent on food and all or most of the rest on housing, clothing and transportation—mainly automobiles.

These four items and the maze of industries related to each composes about 75 per cent of the economy today.

As they go, the economy goes.

Agriculture is the smallest component of the food industry, and often its trend is contrary to those of many industries. Despite production controls and farm prices tied to parity for several basic crops, farm income fell 15 per cent last year. Politics has failed, at great cost, to stabilize farm income.

This may even be a sign that deflation is sneaking like a thief in the night, while everyone is still discussing the terrors of further inflation. Primary products have gone down elsewhere in the world and it is the world market that determines farm prices.

Only a generation ago, according to the government, a third of the people were underfed. Some undernourished percentage is still underhoused or poorly housed. Despite this, building of homes appears to be slackening.

This is another ominous trend. Residential building is an enormous component of total construction. If housing is sliding, accelerated by tight money, it is difficult to believe that industrial expansion plans can long hold up the high level of total construction.

Detroit Is a Mixed Case

The automobile industry is in a ferment. It is moving in several directions at once. After having refused for years to recognize the small-car demand, Detroit has met it half way with "compact" cars. It also is "integrating," building more of its original equipment, such as the batteries that go into new cars.

This, in turn, has led to belt tightening or diversification among suppliers and to fierce competition for the replacement business. The ferment should lead, however, to better cars.

Leaders in the textile and various apparel industries, as well as retailers, predict gains this year of as much as 4 to 8 per cent. Activity is high in clothing lines now and probably there will be some progress.

Wall Street may be a one-way thoroughfare, but the stock exchange is not a place where prices move upward forever. The securities markets reflect or anticipate business conditions and tend to move too high or too low during prolonged changes in the economy. With bonds yielding more than common stocks, this year there could be a definite shift on the part of investors into fixed income securities.

While so many persons have large paper profits the stock market may continue to boil till a sizable number of speculators get hurt. When this will happen is anybody's guess. The volume share-trading last year was the highest since 1929. Banish the thought of a parallel, but everything that goes up can come down.

The Eisenhower administration's efforts to balance the national budget have made progress, but it is not certain that this objective will be achieved by the end of the fiscal year.

U.S. exports of merchandise have been declining, but they still are higher than imports. The lowering of trade barriers may improve the export picture, but it is complicated by the fact that this country still does not belong to any new trading bloc. For the first time in history, the United States is about to begin bargaining with a group of the same economic strength as its own.

The nation cannot go on forever running a big deficit with a number of foreign countries. Eventually, the deficit with them must be met by the export of goods and services.

Whether these goods and services can be produced economically enough to compete in the world market is the hidden but vital issue in the titanic labor struggle now taking place or impending—a struggle in which one battle, perhaps the decisive one, has just been lost by the forces of inflation.

This will also be the vital issue when Congress, just convened, gets down to debating whether to balance the budget with a substantial surplus for debt reduction, or to take the apparently easy way of further impairing the dollar's world position.

The Upturn Did Come

The rebound from the 1957-58 recession brought 1959 into being on a wave of optimism, sparked by the biggest Christmas shopping season in history, and a recovery of 35 per cent in the sales of automobiles.

Observers who tried to peer below the sparkling surface were reluctant to pronounce the recession at an end until they saw an upturn in capital spending—the deferrable factor in business outlays that makes the difference between full employment and an embarrassing number of jobless.

The capital spending upturn did come with the spring, although most business men consulted in February's Department of Commerce Securities and Exchange Commission survey on plant and equipment intentions were inclined to go slow.

Actually, plant investment recovery was as swift as it had been after the 1952-53 setback, or even a little faster.

It was not so good, of course, as the 1950 upturn, when capital outlays moved up as fast as general activity.

During the second quarter real Gross National Product and real personal income both went past the highwater marks set in the winter of 1956-57. Capital spending increases were still not vast but began to edge upward as they always do when sales are good.

Heading for July and the steel strike, business struggled through June to build inventories. Steel users were picking up steel wherever they could. Wholesalers and retailers battled to fill their shelves.

Total inventories rose by $900,000,000, but in most lines of business consumers were buying so eagerly that the ratio of goods on the shelf to monthly sales stood still or even declined. With the price level remaining remarkably steady, Gross National Product broke records, and the gains were real. The Federal Reserve Board's production index went to 155.

The last half of the year was dominated by the steel strike. However, the rising trend in the nation's economy withstood the steel strike's impact for more than a month.

The Federal Reserve index did go from 155 to 153 in July but personal incomes rose by $300,000,000, while department store sales reached a peak and retail sales moved to an annual pace of $219,000,000,000.

By September the steel strike was punishing the nation in more and more ways. The automobile companies shortened their 1959 runs. But retail sales declined very little, even under a blistering summer in the populous East, and the business inventory buildup flattened out only slowly.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION Business NEWS—FEATURES—VIEWS

The same story was repeated in the quarter just ended—unemployment spread through the metal working industries and into building but demand for everything that could be obtained continued to rise. Consumers bought goods and services, stores added inventories of soft goods, and capital investment kept edging upward.

The Picture in Steel

With a few grumbles about slave labor, the steel workers went back to work after the Nov. 7 decision by the Supreme Court upholding a Taft-Hartley injunction. They worked with such a will that the pourings of ingot steel and castings passed the 1958 mark with three weeks of the year to go.

In the past, management-union fights were most often over cents an hour. Current clashes involve management's right to manage, and the basic industry of the nation has surrendered on that issue.

It is David J. McDonald, head of the United Steelworkers of America, not Roger M. Blough or R. Conrad Cooper, chairman and executive vice president, respectively, of the United States Steel Corp., who has stated that the present steel plants can be operated with 400,000 men instead of the nearly 500,000 now employed. But the 500,000 will stay on the job, and each will get more money.

In steel, the railroads and other industries a union philosophy that refuses to look beyond its own jurisdiction is like a nation that ignores all other nations. The productivity of one industry affects others, if not all, and it contributes to services, luxuries, recreation and reduced working time.

Problem of Featherbedding

The release of a million men who have been featherbedding in various industries could raise the wages of those who remain. And the million could make more goods and perform more services in other lines, thus increasing the standard of living for all.

An indictment of featherbedding is not an indictment of all union philosophy. Management has no monopoly on selfishness or wisdom. And neither has government.

We have been saved from massive government intervention in wage-price bargaining, but at a high price—how high we have yet to learn.

Christianity A Thrilling Adventure

QUESTION: I am a 16-year-old boy. Before I became a Christian I was a baseball fan. I still like the game very much. Is this wrong?—B. V.

ANSWER: Being a Christian doesn't keep you from being a normal boy. I like baseball, have always liked it, and probably always will. However, baseball doesn't dominate my life as it once did—Christ does.

Christ brings all life into balance. The most important things we enjoy are put first, then the next-important, etc. There are many things we enjoy after we accept Christ, but our desire is to glorify Him in all that we do. I don't agree with some people who claim that Christianity is a negative thing, crammed with "don't do this, and don't do that." It is a thrilling, adventuresome, exciting way of life with love for God at the very center. The only things we must give up are our sins, the very things that keep life from being joyous and abundant.

I know lots of Christian athletes, many of them in the big leagues, where they are an inspiration to everyone.

Feud Doing Harm To 'Wagon Train'

By PAUL JONES

Some people in television don't know when to leave well-enough alone.

A show like Wagon Train develops a simple, uncluttered format which pleases most of the people and then along comes a producer who feels that he must tamper with the show in an effort to improve it.

As is the case most of the time, the tampering hurts more than it helps.

Wagon Train nudged Gunsmoke out of the No. 1 spot simply because it was a good Western. It had a pair of good cowboys in Ward Bond and Robert Horton. The stories were written around the stragglers who got in the path of the lumbering train.

Jones

Now, what has happened? Bond and Horton have started an inter-office row, the show is going indoors for some set shots and the scripts are becoming so involved that the viewer has to think. And that's not good.

"I have been watching Wagon Train for a long time," writes C. R. McQuewn, of Decatur. "But without doubt the show Dec. 20 was the most pitiful thing I've seen in a long time. Improbable, drawn out, disconnected—I don't think a 6-year-old would have enjoyed any part of it except for the wolves (dogs all dressed up). Why not get back to the old shows that we enjoyed in the past, stop experimenting, quit trying to solve the differences between Bond and Horton?"

The Wagon Train episode Jan. 6 was even worse. Instead of shooting the show out amid the sagebrush the producers moved it indoors and the players got involved in a drama which reminded me of "King's Row." What a bore.

SOMEBODY IN TELEVISION had better start tampering with some of the commercials, though. The viewers are hopping mad about some of the "sagging bra" and "walking girdle" ads.

Dinah Shore

"My husband has to leave the room when the girl starts shaving her legs or the bras start sagging or when the girdles start oozing," writes Mrs. A. L. P., of Atlanta. "And I very much resent this invasion of my privacy as a woman and this unmasking of my feminine 'secrets' by having it blasted over television to all and sundry that women de-fuzz their legs, use deodorants and wear bras and girdles. Horrors! There goes a woman's greatest asset . . . a man's imagination. You, Mr. Jones, have my warmest thanks for crying out against this crime against common decency. Thank you for writing so honestly and so amusingly about much of the slop that is force-fed to us poor viewers. . . ."

Along that same line is a note from a Barnesville reader, L. Rhodes, who likes Dinah Shore because "she does not seem as an ad for the brassiere companies.

"I think she is sweet and modest and unselfish. Her clothes are pretty and to me her singing is the best.

Mr. Rhodes adds this comment: "I did not like the Cyd Charisse thing. . . ."

An Americus reader did, however. "It is a pity that we have to have a bad taste put in our mouths every time we read anything from you," he says. "Why can't someone who has a better disposition than you write the comments on the TV shows? Cyd Charisse was exquisite. . . ."

Robert Horton

HERE ARE SOME SHORT NOTES:

"I used to think the wrestlers on Live Atlanta Wrestling had sex appeal. . . . But not any more. And by the way, I'm not an envious male, but a disinterested female," Barrie D., of Atlanta. . . . "It is true that Arthur Murray is a very somber person but he lets them have their laughs about his 'smile' and he enjoys the joke as well as as everybody else. So before you tear down a program remember you aren't the only one who has an opinion. Thank goodness for that!" R. J. of Newnan. . . . "The kids on dance party are simply awful. The boys' clothes are sloppy and when they dance they appear to be staggering," Peggy Smith, of Atlanta. . . . "Would you be kind enough to write in your column about Lola Albright? She plays Peter Gunn's girl friend. Why don't you write mainly about the major stars?" Wanda Teems, Joan Turner, Belevue Wilson, Rena Pless, of Atlanta. . . . "I have been wondering why Dick Clark lets Arlene Sullivan dance on Bandstand. She is now 17 and she writes for 17 Magazine. Don't get me wrong, I love Arlene." Doris Hester, of Kennesaw. . . . "The Westerns are my favorites but I can't understand why the women portrayed in them are always bareheaded. No woman, good or otherwise, would have been seen outside in those days with her head uncovered. And doesn't anyone give thanks before meals any more?" Mrs. H. H. Arnold, of Maxeys.

Pull Out the Plug!

By BILL POPE

Now that we've all tried to stomp the dickens out of television for interpolating those sneaky "commercials" into the story script, let's look at the movies for a minute.

Moyle screens being the size they are, these despicable practices are perhaps more easily detected.

The most blatant current example of what we're talking about, according to a wire story, occurs in a movie called "A Touch of Larceny."

In it, James Mason, as a British naval officer, has to pretend he is looking for a book. The book is inconsequential as far as the plot is concerned. It just happens to be "The World of Suzie Wong," and Mr. Mason reportedly makes quite a fuss about naming it and goes on to praise it to the skies.

YOU GUESSED IT

Why? Because Paramount, which is releasing "A Touch of Larceny," will also handle the film version of "The World of Suzie Wong."

A leading authority on the built-in commercial is Jerry Wald, characterized by the same story as a man "who turns out films on a sort of assembly-line basis for 20th Century-Fox.

Says Mr. Wald: "You must always be careful not to rub the audience's nose into the commercials. Some people can get sensitive about it."

We got fairly sensitive about it awhile back in a Wald picture called "Mardi Gras." In one sequence, Gary Crosby and Tommy Sands pay a visit to the offices of a Hollywood studio. Plastered all over the place are posters of "In Love and War," another Wald effort.

Mr. Wald threw his precepts to the winds by having one of the big stars of "In Love and War" walk past the camera for a few instants. At this point, we felt our noses had definitely been rubbed in it.

This year, in a movie called "The Best of Everything" (one of our favorites of the season), Mr. Wald was more subtle.

In one scene in a publisher's office, there were perfectly visible and carefully displayed copies of "Beloved Infidel," by Sheila Graham and Gerold Frank, and "Sons and Lovers," by D. H. Lawrence.

Mr. Wald produced "Infidel" and is currently working on "Sons" in England.

NOT OBVIOUS

"You have to dress the set somehow," says Mr. Wald. "I may as well dress it with my own pictures. It's an exposure for my movies and it's not too obvious."

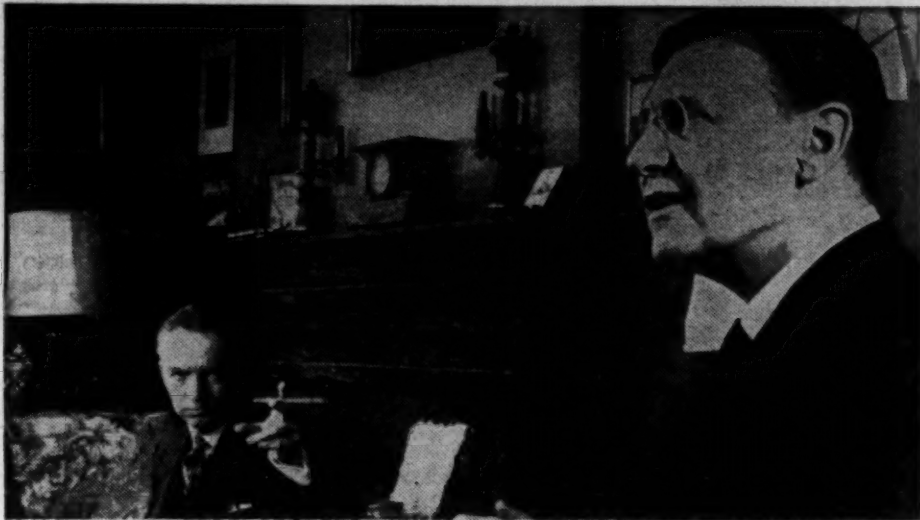

It occurs to us that even the newsreels were not (maybe they still aren't) free of the built-in commercial. It was hard to get through one without being subjected to lingering coverage of the studio's newest movie premiere or the acceptance of an award by a contract star—who usually looked about 40 years older than he or she did in the studio's carefully controlled feature products.

We're catching on, Mr. Wald, we're catching on. We spotted that vaccination scar on Martha Hyer's arm in that Biblical epic "The Big Fisherman." Is the American Medical Association getting into the act, too?

Ernie will devote his entire program to a unique capsule version of the classic operetta. He did the same last year with "The Mikado."

Dimes Drive Pushes Film

Stanley Kramer's "On the Beach," will have its Atlanta premiere, at the Rialto Theatre on Wednesday, Jan. 20, for the benefit of the New March of Dimes.

The picture, starring Fred Astaire, Ava Gardner, Gregory Peck and Anthony Perkins, is the film version of the best-seller written by Nevil Shute.

The story is set in Australia in 1964 and tells of the after-math of a hypothetical nuclear war. In the end, the world's population is destroyed.

The film had its world premiere last December in Moscow, with Kramer and Gregory Peck in attendance, marking the first premiere of an American film in the Soviet Union.

Benny Returns A Favor

By THE TV SCOUT

BEST BETS—A couple of old pros make a couple of back-to-back comedy shows slick affairs.

First there's The Danny Thomas Show with Jack Benny as the guest, returning an old favor. Danny, as usual, integrates his guest into the show, and does it neatly. Benny, playing himself, comes in for his customary quota of ribbing about his age, his miserliness, his baby blue eyes.

The plot has Jack and then Danny making pacts with the Devil, to get big shows and big laughs for the usual price—the soul.

The gags flow thick and Faust and the show is a good example of how best to use guests. 9-9:30 (Ch. 5).

Immediately following there's The Ann Sothern Show which goes slapstick tonight with good results. It all starts with an orphan boy—whose adoptive parents failed to meet him at the plane—checking into the hotel.

Ann takes him home and then things degenerate into a giddy scene when a welfare worker comes to check the O'Connor home.

She's caught up in a few little white lies such as having a husband and the climax, involving a shower and a closet, is good for some large laughs, if you like slapstick. 9:30-10 (Ch. 5).

7:30-8 (Ch. 5)—The usual panel on Masquerade Party will be asked to penetrate some unusual disguises Monday.

One celebrity will come dolled up as another celebrity, and a second challenger will appear as a practicing beatnik.

Audrey Meadows, Faye Emerson and Sam Levenson are those who will try to figure out who's who.

7:30-8:30 (Ch. 11)—The second of Cheyenne's two-parter on Custer's Last Stand begins with the trial of Major Reno for cowardice.

Then we flash back to the battle itself (the battle scenes are taken from some old Errol Flynn movie stock shots) and Cheyenne's part in the proceedings, which was simply that of a ringsider.

Much authentic history is told here, but there is also a lot of fiction, or, at least, supposition. Whatever its faults, it is far superior to the usual Western and, hence, highly recommended.

9:30-10:30 (Ch. 11)—Adventures in Paradise offers little except the chance to see Anna Kashfi in action. The Welsh-Indian girl plays a French-Chinese girl, which sounds like type casting.

The Hollywood Scene

Act Won't Change In Atlanta---Bette

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

North American Newspaper Alliance

Bette Davis

Corinne Calvet

HOLLYWOOD—Bette Davis, clear-eyed and rosy from her two weeks in Laguna, departs Monday with Barry Sullivan for her continuing tour of "World of Carl Sandburg." When in Atlanta, says Bette, "I will not change the reading of the Negro prostitute." (Ed. note: The show will be in Atlanta Jan. 18 and 19.)

PRODUCER Al Zugsmith's most successful picture, he tells me, "Invasion, U.S.A.," was made in seven days on a budget of $154,000, and made him personally a neat profit of half a million dollars.

UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL, which once owned the entire studio, now can use only three sound stages on the lot which is owned by MCA's Revue Productions. And to film Lana Turner's "Portrait in Black," U-I must pay Revue $2,000 a day. How things have changed in Hollywood!

LATEST FAD—to dye your hair to match your minks—is much cheaper than vice versa. Says Corinne Calvet, "I hated myself as a brunette, so I changed to auburn, but that made me look too, you know (I don't), so I matched to my silver blonde minks—just right for me." The silver blonde look is very attractive on certain blue-eyed or gray-eyed ladies.

NEW ISOLDE—Swedish soprano Birgit Nilsson will sing in the Met Opera broadcast of "Tristan und Isolde," next Saturday at noon on WGKA here. Ramon Vinay is scheduled for the Tristan role.

Balladeer Wants To Go West

By JACK PERRY

Everybody wants to be somebody else.

Take Mark Dinning. He's got a hit record that's sold nearly a half million copies. He can make a nightclub audience purr with a soft ballad. He can howl "Hound Dawg" like a civilian-type Elvis. And he's the brother of the once-famous Dinning Sisters.

But is he happy?

"No, I'm not," says 23-year-old Mark. "I don't want to do this. I want to be a cowboy."

Mark Dinning

Right now, the frustrated cowpoke is herding 'em in with his guitar at Club Peachtree. He's been riding the Southern nightclub circuit for about two and a half years.

Mark, a six-foot-two-incher, plays the guitar, sings ballads and then wakes up his listeners with shake-rattle-and-roll sounds.

But Mark says he likes to stay away from the rock 'em-roll 'em music.

LEVELLING OFF

"My ballads seem to go over better. And ballads are all I plan to record. Rock-'n'-roll seems to be levelling off."

Mark's biggest record so far is a puppy-love piece called "Teen Angel." It has sold more than 400,000 records in this country and in Belgium.

The hit was written by one of the Dinning Sisters and her husband, Jean and Red Surrey.

Mark has an album that will be released at the end of the month.

"But this is not what I want," he says waving his hand toward his nightclub audience. "I want to be a cowboy on the movies or television. I can ride a horse."

Before going west, Mark will appear nightly at the Club Peachtree through next Saturday night. He'll be on the Dick Clark Show Jan. 23.

AN OLDTIME—and alltime—favorite will open Monday at the Henry Grady Room, Frank Parker.

Frank's last TV stint, as you remember, was on the now defunct Arthur Godfrey Show.

Before that, he'd been wowing the gals over the airwaves on the various radio Shows of Ben Bernie, Jack Benny and Eddie Cantor.

Born on Manhattan's Lower West Side, Frank once toyed with the idea of a profession in engineering. A few years, later, however, he found himself in Europe studying voice at the famous Milan Conservatory. Then he hit Broadway and Hollywood.

He's been touring the supper club circuit since the end of the Godfrey series.
